CZAR ACQUITS GEN. ORLOFF

Accused Commander Is Restored to Gen. Kuropatkin's Favor.

CHANGES IN STAFF

Officers of Two Corps Resign and Their Successors Are Named.

WORK OF CHINESE BANDITS

[Associated Press Cable to The Gazette.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 6.—The army organ today publishes a long list of new commanders in the far east, including the appointments of Gens. Linevitch and Kaulbars to the first and third armies, respectively.

Gens. Kutnevich and Selivanoff will command the Twenty-second and Thirty-seventh divisions of the First corps, whose chief, Gen. Meyendorff, is resigning on account of ill health. Gen. Slouchevsky, commander of the Tenth corps, has also resigned, and it is expected he will be succeeded by Gen. Jzerpitsky.

The sweeping character of these changes may imply there is no intention on Gen. Kuropatkin's part to assume the offensive during this year's campaign, unless an exceedingly favorable opportunity offers. Indeed, it begins to look like a deadlock below Mukden for the winter unless Port Arthur falls, or the Japanese abandon the idea of renewing the assault upon the fortress there and settle down to a regular siege, either of which would release enough troops to give the preponderance necessary to try to force the Russians out of Mukden.

Orloff Is Reinstated.

Gen. Orloff, whom Gen. Kuropatkin blamed for the Russian reverse at Liao-Yang, declares in the course of an interview published in the Novoe Vremyra today that he obeyed Gen. Stackelberg's orders in making the much criticised attack, in which his division was decimated and he himself wounded. Gen. Kuropatkin apparently is convinced that Orloff was not to blame. The order detaching him has been revoked, and he has been appointed on Gen. Kuropatkin's staff.

According to present arrangements Emperor Nicholas will go this week to Poland to bid farewell to the two rifle brigades stationed not far from Skiernie-wice, going thence to Minsk and Vietebsk, to bid farewell to the Fourth and Sixteenth corps. The trip to Poland, however, may be deferred on account of alarming reports from Warsaw of rioting at Czenstochhova, where the Second brigade is stationed.

Work of Chinese Bandits.

Gen. Kuropatkin reports that Lieut.-Col. Bogdenoff, who was sent by Viceroy Alexieff to explore Mongolia, accompanied by only two interpreters and a courier, was attacked by Chinese bandits November 3 near Duinbin mountain, on the Chinese Eastern railway, and that one of the interpreters was killed, the others of the party being captured.

Cavalry sent in pursuit of the bandits found the corpses of Lieut.-Col. Bogdenoff, the second interpreter, and the courier, which have been brought to Harbin. Gen. Kuropatkin adds that punitive measures will be taken.

Gen. Kuropatkin also reports the repulse of a Japanese attack on his right flank on November 5. Six Russians were killed.

FRENZIED HORSE DRAGS YOUNG MAN TO DEATH

Horrified Spectators See Tragic End of Drunken Rider Who Foolishly Discharged Revolver.

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., Nov. 6.—Scores of horrified spectators saw Henry McCloud, 23 years old, ride to his death on a frenzied horse this morning.

Young McCloud had attended a political meeting last night, and it is said he had been drinking heavily. Notice was first attracted to him when, swinging into the saddle, he drew a revolver and fired several shots. Frightened by the reports, his horse plunged madly toward a railway bridge that spans Twelve Pole river, a short distance below Huntington.

The horse crossed the bridge in safety, with its rider swaying in the saddle, but just as it reached the other side of the street McCloud reeled and fell fom the animal's back, his right foot catching in the stirrup. The horse, now frantic with terror, galloped down the railroad track, dragging McCloud along the ties.

For more than a mile the fearful race continued. The horse never left the track, and all efforts to stop it were futile until several railroad section workmen succeeded in seizing the bridle and bringing the beast to a standstill. McCloud's lifeless body was disengaged from the stirrup. The head had been beaten into a shapeless pulp, and scarcely a bone was unbroken.

WRECKERS AT WORK.

Fifth Attempt Is Made to Destroy Train on the Valley Branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

CUMBERLAND, MD., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—A fifth attempt to wreck a train on the Valley branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad within a few weeks was made just below Harpers Ferry last night. Train No. 1, crowded with passengers, was speeding along when suddenly there was a great explosion, the train running into a pile of cross ties in which were several sticks of dynamite. Engineer Charles Payne and his firemen were almost hurled from the cab by the explosion, which was felt throughout the train.

As on the other occasions, the desperadoes left no clue. Bloodhounds will be employed to run them down.

THREE HEROES OF THE STRUGGLE IN THE FAR EAST

1—Marshal Oyama, the victor at Liao Yang and Sha-Ho.
2—Gen. Stoessel, the hero of Port Arthur, in the trenches with his men.
3—Gen. Kuropatkin on the field of battle.

MR. ROOSEVELT HAS CONFIDENCE

The President Expresses Belief That New York Will Go Republican.

ANALYZES THE SITUATION

The Pittsburgh Gazette Bureau.
Room 10, Postal Building.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 6.

This was a normal Sunday with President Roosevelt, despite the imminence of the presidential election. He read the morning papers to get in full Judge Parker's speech, of which he was given the substance last night. He also read the newspaper forecasts of the election, and the reviews and analysis of the trend of political feeling in various states.

Gov. Odell's figures which predict an unusually large Republican vote in New York city are about the same as those the president has estimated. Mr. Roosevelt believes the Democratic plurality below the Harlem river will be less than 90,000, and he is confident that the up-state vote will give the Republican national ticket a big majority.

The president attended service at Grace Dutch Reformed church at Fifteenth and O streets N. W. at 11 o'clock. With his daughter Ethel he went horseback riding at 4 this afternoon and they were cantering over fields and country highways and byways until after 6. Only the members of the family now in Washington were present at dinner. Alford W. Cooley, civil service commissioner, was the only caller at the White House this evening.

President Roosevelt for two weeks has had less official business to transact than usual. The only thing to relieve what might have been monotony is his keen attention to every detail of the campaign, and the attacks of Judge Parker, to which he finally responded. He has played tennis more than usual, sometimes giving up his daily horseback ride for this pastime.

CORTELYOU STANDS BY HIS ELECTION ESTIMATE

Reports Received During the Past Forty-Eight Hours Confirm the Prediction.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—George B. Cortelyou, chairman of the Republican national committee, was tonight asked whether he had any reason to change his estimate of the probable electoral vote for President Roosevelt, which he had made on Saturday night. He replied:

"As a final forecast I see no reason to change my previous statement, and I adhere to that. After receiving full reports from all over the United States, in the last 48 hours, I am satisfied that the Republican candidates for president and vice president will carry every northern state, with the possible exception of Maryland and Nevada, and will have not less than 314 of the 476 votes in the electoral college."

JUDGE PARKER GOES HOME TO HEAR FROM THE BALLOT

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—After attending services in the Little Church Around the Corner this morning, Judge Parker took his first ride in the subway. He spent a quiet Sunday, receiving no callers, and left the city this evening for Esopus, where he will remain over election day.

TERROR IN ELEPHANT HOUSE.

Insane Man Attempted to Hurl a Child Under the Feet of the Animals.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Visitors fled in terror from the elephant house in the menagerie in Central park this afternoon, when a man, believed to be insane, battled with six policemen and keepers, who overpowered him after he had made an attempt apparently to hurl a little girl under the feet of one of the animals. He described himself as Palmer S. Ely. He was sent to Bellevue.

It required the united strength of the men to carry Ely from the elephant house, and before they had done so he had succeeded in tearing off a part of Keeper Snyder's clothing.

TWO EFFORTS TO HOLD UP TRAIN

Robbers on the Pennsylvania's Washington Division Return After Being Chased Off.

FOILED BY EXPRESS MESSENGER

The Pittsburgh Gazette Bureau.
Press Building,
PHILADELPHIA, PA., Nov. 6.

Train No. 64, on the Pennsylvania's Washington division, was held up by armed robbers twice within one mile tonight while en route from Washington to this city and New York.

Two men who had secreted themselves on the front end of the express car when the train stopped in Baltimore attempted the job. One was white, the other a negro. They were foiled in their desperate efforts by a plucky express messenger. Both escaped in the darkness on this side of the long bridge which crosses the arm of Chesapeake bay between Havre de Grace and Perryville, Md.

The train left Washington at 6:50 in charge of Conductor Sibley and Engineer Gordon. The express car ran immediately back of the locomotive. The messenger was T. Herbert Carter. Following the express car were five day coaches and a Pullman, all filled with passengers.

Carter was sitting at his desk in the express car about 8:15. The train was then drawing near Perryville. He heard a noise at the forward end, and, looking up, saw an iron bar inserted in the front door of the car. While he watched he saw the bar withdrawn and a hand and wrist, clutching a revolver, took its place in the crevice which the bar had opened.

A voice demanded an entrance and for an answer the messenger fired two shots and signaled the train to stop. When the train halted the crew went toward the express car. The robbers had disappeared, however, and the signal was again given to start.

In less than a mile the engineer received another signal to stop and they saw the negro on the tender. He and his companion were compelled to jump, however, when the express messenger threatened to open fire.

FIREMAN FATALLY HURT WHILE RIDING IN A CAB

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Passengers on the Norfolk & Western train No. 15 tonight were startled by the announcement that Fireman Walter Brosden was dead in the cab. Later signs of life were discovered. The man had been struck by a stone and his skull was fractured. The engineer had to stop his train at every flag station and do his own firing. The fireman will probably die.

PLAYED TAG AROUND CAR, AND THE BOY MAY DIE

Samuel Gilliford, aged 10, of 307 Corry street, Allegheny, is at the Allegheny General hospital suffering with concussion of the brain, sustained yesterday by being struck by a Millvale and Etna car at Federal and Isabella streets. He ran in front of the car while playing "Tag" with some boy companions. His condition is not thought to be serious.

MAN HUNT ENDED IN THREE DEATHS

Two Officers and a Desperado Killed in Battle in Kentucky.

HAD MURDERED EIGHT MEN

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

OWINGSVILLE, KY., Nov. 6.—After a man hunt extending over the greater part of the Menifee county mountains, two officers cornered Lipton Day, the most desperate outlaw in the Kentucky mountains, and a desperate battle with rifles took place, Day killing the two officers and they killing him.

The battle occurred on Indian creek, in Menifee county. The officers had been chasing Day several days. From the appearance of the men's bodies when found all three had evidently died almost instantly. Their weapons were lying near them. Day had long been a terror to that section of the mountains. A reward of $800 was offered for him for the killing of United States Marshal Howard Wilson three years ago. Day was wanted for moonshining and Wilson with a posse went to Menifee county after him.

Day was with some companions when found and ordered to surrender. Day and his companions opened fire on the officers who returned it. Howard Wilson and one of Day's companions were killed. William Stamper, a member of Wilson's party, shot Day five times, badly wounding him. Day was placed in the Frenchburg jail, from which he was later rescued by a crowd of his followers. Day had been a fugitive and lived in a cabin between two high mountains. He maintained a line of guards of several miles from his mountain retreat, who kept strangers from approaching him. Day wore a coat of mail under his clothing to prevent assassination. He was 24 years old and had killed eight men.

FIGHT FOR SUPREMACY CULMINATES IN A DEATH

President St. Peter, of Window Glass Workers' Old Body, Is Under Arrest.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

HARTFORD CITY, IND., Nov. 6.—Trouble which has been brewing between the two organizations of window glass workers contesting for supremacy here culminated in a fight today, which resulted in the fatal shooting of Ollie Walker, a member of the Philips organization.

President Paul St. Peter of Pittsburgh and Patrick McFall, a member of the old organization, have been arrested charged with assault with intent to kill. The streets are crowded with glass workers tonight, and serious collision between members of the two factions is feared.

WAS STRAPPED TO BOARD FOR NINETEEN MONTHS

WILKESBARRE, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—After being strapped tightly to a board for 19 months, day and night, little Victor Loewus of Towanda was yesterday released, and is able to walk. The youngster is 4 years old. When he was a little over 2 years old it was discovered that he had spinal trouble. A New York physician recommended the heroic treatment he has endured, and it has cured him.

NAVY SHOULD BE THE BEST

Secretary Morton Says Formidable Ships Preserve Peace.

DEMOCRATS SILENT

The Declaration That the Army Should Be Reduced Is Not Taken Seriously.

CITIZENS COMPETENT JUDGES

The Pittsburgh Gazette Bureau.
Room 10, Postal Building.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 6.

"Construction, instruction, destruction," is Secretry Paul Morton's conception of the American navy.

Secretary Morton has been credited with advocating the building of the largest navy in the world. This is not true. He does not believe the United States navy should be the largest in the world, but does believe that ship for ship it would be better than any other, and be second only to that of England in size.

In his speech at Highlandtown, Md., Secretary Morton yesterday dwelled at some length upon a national naval policy. He said:

"The Democratic party charges us with being extravagant. They are not specifying, but claim, among other things, that our army is too large. Our army, I believe, represents in each soldier about 1,300 inhabitants. This they call militarism. I do not believe the Democratic party would reduce the army if they were in power today. I do not believe they mean what they say when they declare the army to be too large.

"When it comes to the navy, they say nothing whatever in their platform, although the committee on resolutions at the St. Louis convention was in favor of reporting for a liberal annual increase for the navy, but this plank was stricken out of the platform at the suggestion of Senator Tillman for the very statesmanlike reason given by him that the navy had no votes.

"Naturally, I am an advocate of the navy. I believe it should be efficient. I believe that ship for ship we should have as good a navy as any other nation in the world. It is not necessary for us to have as large a navy as England has, but I stand solidly for a navy second to that of England.

"I believe in a navy of such fighting force that it will discourage any other nation from wanting to have an engagement with us. I believe in a navy so formidable that it will preserve the peace, and I believe in a navy so well prepared at all times for war that war will never come. The larger our navy is, the more money it costs us, the greater the fixed charges are sure to be, and yet I believe I am safe in leaving it to any American audience that nothing is further from the in a niggardly manner or to have a navy in a niggardly manner or to have a navy that we cannot all be proud of."

DEVERY PROCLAIMS HE IS FOR MR. ROOSEVELT

"Big Bill" Says, Speaking as an Individual, That He Believes in the President.

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—William Stephens Devery indorses the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for president.

"I shall certainly vote for Roosevelt next Tuesday," he said, "and you can say that many Deveryites will do the same, although in this case I speak as Devery, the individual."

Devery would not deny that many of his followers were actively engaged in working for the success of the Republican ticket.

"Speaking of trusts. Parker is surrounded by a fine crowd, isn't he? If he ever gets in he will be so tied up he won't know himself. You can say for me, though, that I think Parker is a nice man. But Roosevelt is the greatest who ever came over the pike. Look how he whirlwinded the country. I believe in Roosevelt. He is all to the good and that is why I go out and cast my first Republican vote for him next Tuesday."

THE TICKET IS SAFE.

Tom Taggart Desires This Optimistic Democratic Prophecy to Be Given to Everyone.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 6.—Thomas Taggart, chairman of the national Democratic committee, spent the day at his office in conference with state party leaders. When asked for an expression of opinion as to the result of the election Tuesday, he replied:

"Say to everyone that the national Democratic ticket is safe."

When requested to give figures in connection with this prediction, he refused. He was vigorous in his prediction that the Democratis of Indiana would elect the state and legislative ticket.

Caught Wild Man by Indian Ruse.

POTTSVILLE, PA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Stephen Horusk, the wild man, who has been terrorizing travelers over the mountains below Schuylkill Haven, was captured today and taken to the county insane asylum by a clever trick. Horusk was making smoke signals on a mountain ridge, in imitation of the Indians. The officers made a similar fire on an adjoining ridge. They then waited in ambuscade until the madman, impelled by curiosity, walked into their trap.

Woman Commits Suicide.

GREENSBURG, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Despondent because she could no longer do the little chores about the country home, which had been her work for years, Mrs. Elizabeth Morris, 83 years old, last night committed suicide by cutting an artery in her left wrist. Mrs. Morris formerly lived at Youngstown, and was admitted to the indigent ward 15 years ago.

WOULD ABSORB THE DOMINION

Andrew Carnegie Favors the Annexation of Canada.

UNIVERSAL PEACE

Also Believes All Europe Will Be United and Wars Will Cease.

STILL HOPE IN THE FAR EAST

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Universal peace and the absorption of Canada by the United States, are the keynotes of an interesting statement given out by Andrew Carnegie, who is passing his autumn days in his Fifth avenue house. The famous ironmaster, active and alert as a boy, in spite of his years, is deep in his work of aiding in the movement of international arbitration and this in spite of the multitudinous duties exacted by his large affairs in the commercial world.

Enthusiastic in his desire for world peace, Mr. Carnegie said in his statement, after discussing various problems which today form the chief menaces to the tranquillity of the great nations:

"It is my earnest prediction and belief that the day will come when all Europe will be united under one strongly centralized government, just as the American union exists now, and as an example for the world to follow and heed. The dual and triple alliance is a pronounced—an initial—step in that direction."

"Do you consider, then, that the unification principle is the most vital message of the present age, Mr. Carnegie?"

War as a Peril.

"I consider—I firmly believe," was the emphatic answer, "that by the year 3,000 and probably long before the nineteenth century, tremendous as its record of achievement has been, will be most distinguished and applauded as having given the world for the first time a permanent tribunal as a means of settling international disputes. That is to be our greatest gift to mankind—a gift for which posterity will render praise."

"When, in your opinion, will war cease to be a peril?"

"Again it would be hazardous to venture a prediction," he replied. "But this war between Russia and Japan is opening the eyes of the world to the need and possibilities of arbitration."

"In view of his expressed attitude in fostering The Hague congress, were you not surprised that the czar did not propose arbitration with Japan before engaging in war?" was suggested.

"While there is life there is hope. The Manchurian campaign is not ended yet. This war has cast a protound shadow upon all peace-loving people. We in this country are over-inclined to criticise the Russians. Do we forget that Japan attacked Port Arthur before war was declared? Do let us be just to Russia."

Says Russia Will Win.

"Then you have hopes that the Russo-Japanese war may yet revert for settlement to The Hague tribunal?"

"I will not say that; I can only watch and mark the progress in that direction. One thing I will say, however, and that is that Japan, the attacking party, will be repulsed—driven back."

"Do you expect Russia to be victorious in the end?"

"Yes," he said emphatically. "I believe Russia has right on her side, having been attacked before she had an opportunity to arbitrate. I believe that Japan will be driven back to her island home."

Mr. Carnegie briefly discussed the Philippine question, expressing the belief that it was our natnonal duty to establish an independent government there as soon as possible.

"Then you are opposed to expansion?" he was asked.

"No, sir. Far from it. I believe that every island within hailing distance of American shores should fly the Stars and Stripes and look to Washington as its source of government and protection."

Getting Closer to Canada.

"When do you think the time will come for a Canadian accession?"

"We are getting closer together every day, earnestly. Every time an American crosses the border and establishes a home in the Canadian northwest, and every time a Canadian casts his fortunes among us, a link is added in the chain which sooner or later is sure to bind the two countries in one.

"We over here must, and in my opinion will, all be one, just as the nation of Europe will eventually be practically one. What will be the advantage? Simply this: It will guarantee the peace of the North American continent; and the peace of this hemisphere is to us worth more than all the millions of dollars revenue that we might gain by tariff trading."

SHE WAS A NEW WOMAN.

Trailed Down a Thief and Arrested Him in a Truly Sleuth Fashion.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Mrs. Emma Messenger of this city last night proved herself to be "a new woman" of a pronounced and vigorous type. Returning home from a visit out of town she discovered her room had been entered during her absence and that a pocketbook containing $11 was stolen. Suspecting Charles E. Griffith, a boarder, she started in pursuit, and after a lengthy search foud him in a saloon.

Quietly entering she grasped Griffith by the collar and dragged him out in spite of his struggles. Then tightening her grip on his throat, she compelled him to accompany her home, where she locked him in a room and summoned the police. To make sure that he should not escape, she accompanied him to the station house, where she made a formal charge of larceny. In spite of the fact that her prisoner surrendered the stolen pocketbook and part of the money, Griffith was held for the grand jury.

PATS ITSELF UPON THE BACK

Democratic Party Felicitates Country on Its Dignified Campaign.

SAYS ITS PALM IS CLEAN

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Democratic national committee today gave out for publication a formal and final statement. It is addressed to "Democratic and Independent Voters," and reads as follows:

"This committee has conducted a national canvass in a manner, it believes, befitting the dignity and integrity of the American people. It has advanced no imaginative claims respecting results, and has not accepted for use in the campaign a single dollar from the tariff-bred trusts, whose exactions have so greatly increased the cost of every necessary of life, and which are now contributing from their gains great sums of money to perpetuate Republican rule.

"The Democratic candidate, if elected, will be absolutely free from obligation, direct or implied, to any person or group of persons other than the whole people, who shall have entrusted to him the maintenance of the welfare of the republic.

"This committee asks for itself only so much credit as such conduct of a canvass may merit, but it does feel that both the party and the country are to be congratulated on the fact that out of discordance of weakness has been wrought a union of strength. The difficulties attendant upon this achievement are well understood. At every turn, by every conceivable method, in every doubtful district of every doubtful state, the efforts which we maintain to have been at least patriotic, and know to have been creditable to both the candidate and this committee, have been met by an avalanche of money.

"The source of supply of this great Republican campaign fund is no longer a matter of suspicion. The Republican candidate declared, with great vehemence, that he had promised nothing more than what he may be pleased to consider 'a square deal' in return for campaign contributions. The Republican chairman, he vigorously asserted, had assured him more than once that there had been no necessity for making direct pledges—that it had been found possible to obtain all the money needed, up to that time, at any rate, without doing so.

"Neither he nor his chairman denied that contributions had been accepted from the trusts, for the simple reason that the fact was undeniable and each knew that it was susceptible of overwhelming proof. The payments were 'voluntary'; not forced; such, and such alone, was the burden of denials which were virtual admissions.

"The only question remaining was 'How much had been considered necessary?' Fortunately even this information was forthcoming. Simultaneously with the preparation of the most extraordinary temperamental document, indicative of the keenest desperation which has ever emanated from the White House, the candidate's most intimate and trusted adviser, the former secretary of war, just returned from Washington, was preparing another and more detailed 'defense' of his chief in this city.

"The mere fact of contribution,' he held to be inoffensive. His chief pride was in the great work accomplished for so small an expenditure. 'The fact is,' he proudly declared, 'that it is the smallest fund we have had for 12 years—about one-half the Republican fund when McKinley was elected in 1896.' That fund, it is well known, was approximately $10,000,000. Accepting these figures as correct therefore, the Republican chairman has had only about $5,000,000 at his disposal.

"The chain is complete—the trust contributions not denied by either the candidate or the chairman unequivocably admitted, and the amount plainly stated by the former secretary of war. Five million dollars is the sum. More could have been had if needed, but, under the present chairman's more careful direction, that was deemed sufficient.

"But why did the trusts contribute to the Republican canvass? 'They were asked,' says the outspoken former secretary.

"Did they think they were buying a presidency? Or were they content with the assurance from the Republican candidate of 'a square deal?' In either case, upon their own testimony, the Republican candidate stands today before his fellow countrymen as one willing and eager to accept for himself a presidency that has cost protected monopolies the great sum of $5,000,000.

"Can $5,000,000 of trust money buy a presidency? Can this sum, meant as it is, contributed in the hope of favors to be returned, and gratefully accepted as a necessary means for the gratification of personal ambition, suffice to thwart the will of the American people?

"We cannot, will not, and do not believe it. Moreover, we have the cheering intelligence to convey to all Democratic, independent and patriotic citizens that the most recent and thorough canvasses of the doubtful states are absolutely convincing that Judge Parker will be elected.

"Fully appreciating the fact that within 48 hours the actual result will be known, and keenly sensible of the responsibility we assume, we declare our positive belief that the Democratic candidates will receive at least 270 votes in the electoral college.

"We appeal to all patriotic citizens to do their duty by their country and participate in the triumph of an unpurchasable people."

SPORTSMEN ON THE GO.

Hunters Bring Reports That Game Birds Are Migrating from Western Pennsylvania.

The nimrod who cares more for a day's sport in the woods than the strenuous excitement of election day, is packing up his gun and ammunition and grooming his dogs for a shooting expedition tomorrow. Local railroad stations last night were crowded with sportsmen who were eager in their anticipation of a lucky day in the fields. On every through train dogs yelped from their traveling kennels as they were loaded into baggage cars, and the sophisticated tourist with the golf sticks was crowded into the background by the ubiquitous hunter in seagrass duck and brown corduroy.

When the Buffalo express came in on the Allegheny Valley two nimrods stepped off carrying 11 pairs of nice fat rabbits. Behind they trailed a brace of weary beagles, who wagged their tails as if proud of their share in the hunt. Alongside the little hounds trotted a fine old pointer with sad eyes.

"Ho! Where are your birds?" shouted one of the hunters who was climbing into an Ohio train. The pointer regarded him with contempt.

"The quail have migrated," said the Allegheny Valley sportsman.

A good many people laughed at this, but it is the same report that many experienced quail shooters are bringing from localities where in former years birds were to be found in plenty.

PRIZE HUNTERS BUSY.

Carnegie Institute Essay Contest Stimulates School Children.

School children of Pittsburgh and Allegheny who will compete in the Carnegie Institute prize essay contests will visit the museum and art galleries by the score this week to get material for their compositions. Last year there were almost 1,000 contestants and Col. Samuel Harden Church said yesterday that he expected many more this year. Fifty prizes will be given ranging from $2 to $25 each. The prize winners will be announced on December 22.

Last year the majority of the awards went to Allegheny pupils and this time Col. Church expects a good-natured rivalry to stimulate the youngsters in both cities to better efforts.

Could Not Find Uncle.

Two well dressed little Polish boys, Sigmund and Louis Maroski, aged 11 and 5, were found by a policeman last night wandering along Carson street and were taken to the South Thirteenth street police station, fed and put to bed. They said they lived at Scott Haven and their mother died four weeks ago and they came to the South Side yesterday to visit their uncle, Sigmund Staroski, at 1911 Carson street. The police found that no person of that name lived there and will try to find him today.

TELLS TERRIBLE TALES OF RUSSIAN SAVAGERY

Baron Kaneko of Japan Says Czar's Men Violate Every Rule of Warfare.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Baron Kentara Kaneko, the noted Japanese financier who is in this country on a special mission, is indignant at Russian methods of warfare. Said he today:

"I have often been asked by Americans about those Russian soldiers at the front near Shakni river. They are not Siberian soldiers, nor common Russian soldiers, but are picked soldiers from Moscow, Warsaw, Odessa and other principal Russian cities. They are really the flower of the Russian army, furnished with modern weapons and commanded by generals thoroughly trained in military science and experiences. They are the mightiest enemy we ever encountered.

"Russia has about 280,000 soldiers near Mukden. We have about 250,000 soldiers, also of high standard, a large number having fought in the Chinse war and during the Boxer troubles.

"At the battle of Liao-Yang the Russians fought in the most fiendish way. When our soldiers die on the field the Russians crush their skulls, cut open their abdomens, dig out hearts and eyes. This, of course, enraged our soldiers, but our commander-in-chief gave special orders not to retaliate.

"Our rule in this time of war is this: Return enemy's cruelty with your humanity.

"That is our golden rule of warfare, kept to its letter. When we see the Russian dead soldiers on the battlefield we bury them; if we find watches and jewels and other valuables belonging to the dead men we collect them, pack them in boxes and send them to St. Petersburg through the French embassy. The Russians do not do this. We never receive any packages from them.

"Another thing—according to the custom of modern warfare, as decided at the conferences at The Hague, belligerents must wear the uniform of their army, and may not put on any other when they are on the fighting line. But the Russians wear Chinese clothing on the fighting line; consequently, when we see them coming in a body, being clothed in Chinese dress, we cannot fire at them, but as they approach our lines we discover they really are Russians.

ALL EFFORTS FAIL TO RAISE THE VARIAG

Japan Secures Firm Control Over Korean Finances by Abolition of the Native Mints.

[Special Cable to The Gazette.]

(Copyright, 1.04, by New York Herald Co.)

SEOUL, Oct. 28, via CHEFOO, Nov. 6.—The efforts of the engineers to raise the Variag, at which they have been working for six months, yesterday ended in a complete failure. A new method will be used and another attempt made to raise the Russian warship within a month.

Acting on Japanese advice, the Korean finance department will abolish the government mints, depending on the Japanese mints to coin the new currency when the financial situation requires. This decision secures more strongly Japanese control over Korean finances.

The recently appointed bureau for investigating the finances of the imperial Korean household discovered a shortage of 10,000,000 yen, whereupon the bureau was immediately abolished by imperial edict. A closer investigation was undesired, the disclosures probably implicating those high in authority.

SHELTERS OF CORNSTALKS.

They Are Being Used by Japanese in Frigid Manchuria—Reinforcements Continue.

FUSAN, Nov. 6.—(Gen. Kuroki's Headquarters, Nov. 5.)—The cold weather of the past week culminated today in a sharp wind and flurries of snow. The ground is frozen, but the soldiers build few fires for warmth, lest they draw the Russian shots. They have remarkably and ingeniously constructed shelters of cornstalks whenever they are unable to occupy Chinese houses. Fur overcoats are being used.

MUKDEN, Nov. 6.—The Japanese are working hard entrenching their front, which begins to look like a continuous fort. It is believed they are preparing seriously to advance, making their front strong, possibly in order that it may be held by a comparatively small force while the heavier force engages in flanking movements. They continue to receive reinforcements.

KAZNAKOFF GETS PAPERS.

Russia's Representative at Court of Inquiry Is Given Possession of the Government's Case.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 6.—The foreign office has communicated all the documents relating to the North sea incident to Admiral Kaznakoff, who had an audience with the emperor today, and later, with Capt. Clado, conferred with the Grand Dukes Alexis and Alexander.

Sir Charles Hardinge, the British ambassador, today submitted to Foreign Minister Lamsdorff three additional articles of the Anglo-Russian convention agreement, the first providing for legal assessors for the contracting parties, the second for a division of the expenses of the commission, and the third that the decision of the majority of the commission shall be binding.

MORE NAMES FOR THE NORTH SEA COMMISSION

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The Daily Telegraph, which is often inspired by the government, suggests that Admiral Sir John Fisher will represent Great Britain on the international commission to inquire into the North sea affair. A telegram from Constantinople says that M. Mandelstam, Grandman of the Russian embassy there, who is an expert on international law, will represent Russia before the commission, but in what capacity is not stated.

Gen. Linevitch Takes Field.

KHABAROVSK, Nov. 6.—By Gen. Kuropatkin's order, Gen. Linevitch left today to rejoin the field forces.

Mrs. O'Leary claims that her husband left her with three small children to support and that two of them died during his absence.

MANY OF PORT ARTHUR'S GARRISON DESERTING

Russian Commanders at Mukden Prepare Men to Hear of the Citadel's Fall.

[Associated Press Cable to The Gazette.]

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Special dispatches from Chefoo and Tientsin report that the defenders of Port Arthur have retired to the Liati hill fort, where they are holding out desperately, entrenched, and with 10 guns of large calibre. Many Russians, the correspondents assert, are deserting and surrendering. The Japanese, it is added, are advancing with irresistible energy.

Bennett Burleigh, the Daily Telegraph's correspondent, reports from Chefoo that there was no fighting on the night of November 5. The troops of the mikado, he says, have frequently stolen into the native town of Port Arthur after dark, but invariably were driven out at daylight with heavy losses. The Japanese have four large forts facing the Russian works on Rihliung mountain and Shanshu mountain, where they are mounting naval guns on stone foundations.

Mukden dispatches to Berlin state that the Russian commanders are preparing their men to hear of the fall of Port Arthur.

SENATOR KNOX AT ERIE.

Is Inspecting the Proposed Site for New Naval Training School on the Great Lakes.

Senator P. C. Knox went to Erie last night to inspect the proposed site for the new naval training school which the government will establish on the great lakes. The people of Erie are making a strong bid for the institution and Senator Knox will be their champion before the committee on naval affairs. He has said many things favoring the Erie site and today will be shown over the ground. He will return home tonight.

Senator Knox says that beside offering a central location for the school, with charming surroundings and healthful climate, that Erie is so enshrined in the history of Perry's triumphs in the war of 1812 as to offer a patriotic plea for the government's choice.

The woman had been slightly cut with a bottle.

Sally Anderson of 47 Poplar alley paid $25 and costs on the same charge, and two women found in her house were fined as much.

FIRES IN M'KEES ROCKS.

Firemen Had Not Enough Hose—Grocery, Bakery, Clothing and Liquor Stores Damaged.

The McKees Rocks firemen were called to fight two serious fires yesterday morning. Between 1 and 2 o'clock a. m. they were summoned to West Park, where a grocery and butcher shop belonging to Samuel Schwartz was in flames. They found that a quarter of a mile of hose more than they had was necessary to reach the building, which was destroyed, causing a loss of $900. Schwartz is temporarily absent from McKees Rocks.

At 4 o'clock flames were seen issuing from the clothing store of U. Goldhamer at McKee street and Chartiers avenue. The blaze quickly communicated to a bakery belonging to Jacob Hannenberg on one side and the wholesale liquor store of Burgess William Zinkhan on the other. The stock of the bakery was a total loss and the roof of Zinkhan's store was damaged before the firemen got the blaze under control. The house occupied by Goldhamer belongs to Feingold & Kantrovitch. It was almost gutted. The loss to Goldhamer is estimated at $8,000. The damage to the building is placed at $1,000, covered by insurance.

WEDS PRIMA DONNA OF A COMIC OPERA

David Watts, Grandson of Late Simon Cameron, Is Happy Groom.

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

CUMBERLAND, MD., Nov. 6.—The facts of a wedding of romantic interest, solemnized Thursday midnight, leaked out here this evening. David Watts of Harrisburg, Pa., grandson of the late Simon Cameron, and nephew of former United States Senator Donald Cameron, and Miss Gene Luneska of New York, prima donna of the comic opera "The Strollers," were married just after the performance.

It is understood that the Rev. Dr. James E. Moffatt of the First Presbyterian church officiated, the ceremony taking place at the manse. The groom is of a prominent Presbyterian family. The marriage record gives his age as 21 and his bride's as 25. She is a handsome brunette. Mr. Watts came here with the company from Hagerstown Thursday morning, and stopped at the Queen City hotel. He had the marriage license marked "don't publish" and requested the clerk to maintain the strictest secrecy.

Mr. Watts was very nervous lest something interpose to prevent the wedding. It is said he feared vigorous objection from his family. He is said to be wealthy.

Friday morning Mrs. Watts left with her company for Grafton, W. Va., while Mr. Watts took a train an hour later for his home in Harrisburg, but not until after a prolonged and affectionate farewell at the depot that attracted the attention of the company and scores of people standing about.

BROKE JAIL AT DIVINE SERVICES

Three Men Make a Desperate Dash for Liberty in Delaware.

TWO ARE STILL AT LARGE

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

DOVER, DEL., Nov. 6.—A sensational jail break stirred all Dover today and had men, boys and dogs on the road and fields engaged in a man hunt. Divinity students from the Wilmington conference academy filed into the jail today to conduct the Sabbath worship, but they were not all in when a crowd of prisoners standing near the corridor door made a mad dash for liberty. Students and jailers were temporarily bewildered, but they recovered their senses in time to recapture all but three, who dashed into the street.

"Ned" Shockley, a professional jail breaker, was felled near the baseball grounds by a jailer's revolver, and was supposed to be dangerously wounded. Shockley afterward admitted to the jail physician who had come to probe for the ball that he had only pretended he was shot, because they were running him into a ditch.

Samuel Barrett, sentenced to seven years, and Louis Clark, also a long term prisoner who precipitated the Kenton riot in which a man was killed, made good their escape. Both are desperadoes. Clark was overtaken by one of the students, a football athlete, who tackled him low, but the fugitive drew a razor and broke away from his heroic captor. Later this evening it was reported that Barrett had been seen making for Maryland.

He had turned on the gas in the oven and stuck a lighted torch in the door when the explosion followed. The matter was reported to the police, but at 11 o'clock last night Mack was still at the shop and no physician had been called.

While assisting the police in searching for his assailant, he dropped a bloody knife and disappeared without giving his name.

He was charged with being a suspicious person and was fined $25 and costs, or 30 days to the workhouse yesterday. While giving his residence as Connellsville, Pa., the police say that he is a member of the "Brownsville avenue gang."

SUE WILLIAMS' HOUSES RAIDED

Woman Who Says She Gave Capt. Wilson $100 Makes Charge Against Scandrett.

SHE WAS KEPT IN A DUNGEON

Of the 256 disreputable houses in Allegheny the police raided two yesterday morning. Both belong to Mrs. Sue Williams, the woman who testified before Alderman Toole last Thursday that on July 1, 1903, she paid Capt. James Wilson $100 for the privilege of opening a disorderly house and selling liquor without a license.

The house occupied by Mrs. Williams at 62 West Robinson street was raided first, and a few minutes later Roundsmen Frank Lee and Joe Dean, with several policemen, entered the house run by Lillian Earl at 67 West Robinson street. Lillian Earl rents from Mrs. Williams. Not another house in the city was disturbed.

On the docket at Central station there is sworn evidence that in both houses there was wild disorder and such riot that the neighbors were greatly annoyed. This statement both the women and those arrested with them deny. Mrs. Williams says there was no noise whatever in her house and that she and several of the women in her house were conversing with some men who had just been admitted. In both houses seven visitors and five women were taken.

Waiting for the Wagons.

The raids were made at 1 o'clock in the morning, and were evidently prearranged, as Director Scandrett and Supt. Campbell were at the lockup when the wagons arrived. Mrs. Williams was fined $50 and costs, which was paid by Amos Dachroth on behalf of the men who are furnishing the money to prosecute the graft investigation. Mrs. Earl was fined $25 and costs, and the women and visitors got off with minor fines. Neither Scandrett nor Campbell will speak about the raids. In telling her story yesterday to The Gazette, Mrs. Williams made some sensational statements. She said:

"When we arrived at Central station Director Scandrett, Supt. Campbell and Capt. James Wilson were there. After we had been searched by the matron and were about to be locked in the matron's department, where women are always confined, Capt. Wilson pointed to me and said to the sergeant:

"'Lock that woman in the dungeon; that's good enough for her.'

"I was taken out of the matron's room and put in a cell in another part of the building. The place was lined with cement throughout and all I had to sit on was a wooden bench. I was kept there until 10 o'clock this morning, when Amos Dachroth came and paid my fine.

Mrs. Williams' Serious Charge.

"While I was being taken from the matron's room Director Scandrett and Supt. Campbell took the men who were in my house out into the corridor and I heard Director Scandrett say:

"'Now, you fellows have got to swear that you bought liquor from Sue Williams or we will send you to the workhouse for six months without a fine.'

"Fortunately, those men had been in my house but a minute before we were raided and had had no chance to buy beer if they had wanted. They refused to tell lies and were let off with fines. It is only spitework on the part of the police department, but they haven't got me scared a bit. I have the assurance of the district attorney that I shall be protected and I feel confident that I will. It seems strange that the Allegheny police would demand and take money from me for the privilege of selling beer and then run me in for doing it."

Attorney John Marron was asked last night what he thought of the police proceedings. He said:

"Candidly, I think the Allegheny police officials have become madmen. They could not help along the graft investigation better than by doing just what they are. Then they made another mistake yesterday morning when they refused to take bail for Mrs. Williams. They demanded a money deposit, a thing they have no right to do. I have spoken to District Attorney Stewart and John Haymaker, and both are well pleased with the way things are going. There will be more news before the week is over."

FOUND STOLEN GOODS.

Detectives Cole and Eagan Recover $500 Worth of Articles in Allegheny.

Detectives Hagan and Cole yesterday found the homes of Fannie Dzoorsohak and Mary Keshekover, who were arrested Saturday in Fifth avenue. When placed in custody the women refused to tell where they lived and yesterday their husbands made inquiry for them at the Allegheny Central police station. The officers sent the men to the local detective bureau and Cole and Eagan brought the women before their husbands. The men took the officers to Ravine avenue, Troy Hill, Allegheny, where they recovered $500 worth of stolen articles. The goods consisted of rolls of cloth, silk, linens, skirts, coats, pocketbooks, belts and cologne. It is alleged the women peddled these articles through the country.

Information has been made against the woman by Detective F. H. Filson of a downtown department store, and they will be given a hearing this morning. The daughter of Mary Keshekover told the officers her mother had been bringing quantities of goods homes for years.

FIGHTERS ARE FINED.

Disciples of the Strenuous Life Get Into Trouble With the Police.

E. B. Schenck, who nearly bit off a finger on the hand of J. L. Beeler, with whom he was fighting on Oliver avenue, was fined $5 and costs yesterday.

Marshal Armstead paid a fine of $25 and costs for cutting at Louis Fleischman and doing damage to his coat and vest. Armstead thought he helped a policeman to arrest a woman and picked a fight with him.

Eugene Fagan of Federal street, Allegheny, was fined $25 and costs or 50 days for fighting Officer John Callahan on South Diamond street.

GIVEN 60 DAYS APIECE WITHOUT OPTION OF FINE

James Graham of Chartiers street, Joseph Mack and James Donough of Sedgwick street, Allegheny, each got 60 days to the workhouse without a fine yesterday. They were arrested in a Federal street saloon late Saturday night. It is alleged they were trying to rob a drunken man. John Miller of Liberty street, for trying to get one of the prisoners away from the officers, was fined $5 and costs.

DIDN'T SAY GOOD EVENING, SIMPLY THREW THE LAMP

William Yeager of 1213 Liberty avenue was fined $10 and costs or 30 days to the workhouse yesterday for throwing a lamp at Mrs. Alice Curlin, 1211 Liberty avenue. The woman was sitting at a table sewing when Yeager, seemingly without cause, entered her house and attacked her and then threw the lamp. She was not injured and escaped from the house and summoned Officer Richards.

Will Produce "She Stoops to Conquer."

The Carnegie Dramatic club of Braddock, organized eight years ago and directed by Henry J. Bird, a former member of Sir Henry Irving's London stock company, will present Richard Sheridan's comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," in Carnegie music hall, Braddock, next Thursday and Friday evenings. The production will be under the joint direction of Mr. Bird and Alfred H. Goodby of Wilkinsburg, a young author and playwright and an official of the East Pittsburgh plant of the Westinghouse company.

He Was Carrying Away the Till.

James Adams, colored, of Mulberry alley was caught trying to carry away a till Saturday night at the store of John Bernstein, 3059 Penn avenue. He was held by the proprietor, with the assistance of some customers, until a policeman arrived. At the hearing before Magistrate James J. Kirby he was fined $30 and costs.

CARS ARE FILTHY, SAYS DR. BOOTH

City Physician Declares Health Bureau Does Not Exercise Its Authority.

SHOULD REMOVE PLUSH SEATS

"The street cars are certainly kept in a filthy and unsanitary condition. The state law is broad enough to enable the bureau of health of Pittsburgh to compel the cars to be kept clean, and yet it makes no provision to do so," said City Physician B. A. Booth yesterday.

"The bureau of health does not attempt to compel the street car company to keep its cars clean, and it has never taken any steps to prevent disease breeding in the cars, except in a few cases where smallpox patients were taken from the cars. In these exceptional cases the cars were disinfected by the health authorities. There is no denying the fact that street cars are great breeders of disease when they are not in a sanitary condition, and while it may be a pretty hard thing for the company to do it, yet it ought to be compelled to keep the cars clean and sanitary all the time.

"What the company should do is to remove the plush seats with which its cars are equipped and put in cane seats. The plush seats collect the disease germs and retain them, while the cane seats do not, and are easily kept clean. Other cities are getting rid of the plush seats in cars as fast as possible, for it is recognized that they are inimical to health. A person who has the smallpox or some other contagious disease will leave the germs in the seat, and the next person who sits down there is very likely to be contaminated. There is no doubt that many persons contract smallpox in street cars.

"On account of the danger that besets nearly every person who rides in a car the closely-confined atmosphere should be made as pure as possible.

"Another thing that is very harmful to health in street cars is the habit of spitting on the floor and between the back of the seats and the windows. This produces disease germs which are breathed with the dust that accumulates in the bottom of the car and which is stirred up by the motion of the car. There is a city ordinance prohibiting spitting in street cars, and also a rule of the company, but neither are enforced."

As Dr. Booth admits, most of the cars that run on the system of the Pittsburgh Railways Company are abominably filthy, and many are not cleaned for weeks at a time. They are never disinfected, as Dr. Booth says, except in exceptional cases where a smallpox patient is taken from a car. Even during the recent widespread smallpox epidemic in Pittsburgh, the street cars were not disinfected. Dr. Booth declares that the city health authorities have ample authority to compel the traction company to keep their cars clean and free from disease, yet for some reason they do not exercise this authority.

LAST RALLY WAS HELD OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

County Organization Conduct Final Meeting of Revival Services in Allegheny.

The last session of the world's union rally of the Christian Endeavor union, as far as Allegheny county is concerned, was held yesterday afternoon in the Second United Presbyterian church, Stockton avenue and Sandusky street, Allegheny.

John L. Moore, ex-president of the local union, presided, and J. M. Copeland, president of the Allegheny city branch, led devotional exercises, while the Rev. Dr. W. H. McMillan, pastor of the church, offered prayer.

The Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the international organization and organizer of the first Christian Endeavor society, spoke on "The Development of Christian Endeavor Work." He told of the first society established in Williston, Me., and the subsequent establishment of societies in England and Australia. He cited the fact that 2,000 members of the societies in China lost their lives during the Boxer uprising.

"We have today," said Dr. Clark, "65,000 societies with a total membership of nearly 4,000,000."

He urged a renewed and continued impetus in the work in all fields of religious effort and in the establishment of additional missions.

Treasurer William Shaw of the international organization stated that all money collected was being applied to support field secretaries in foreign lands. He made an earnest plea for liberal contributions. An offering of nearly $300 was raised, which, together with the offerings of Saturday's meeting, aggregate $800.

Some Very Tempting Offers For Large Rugs.

Really this is an extraordinary offer and we are inclined to think the reader will agree with us after the following paragraphs have been discussed. The opportunity is presented today to buy carpet-sized rugs for significantly reduced prices. It should engage the attention, especially, of people about to take up housekeeping, or people who have been meditating the purchase of a new carpet-sized rug. Again the following offers are extraordinary:

$17.00 Each—the regular low price $25.00. American Axminster Rugs of the size of 12 feet by 9 feet. The patterns assimilate those beautiful Persian effects now so favorably looked upon and so much sought for.

$29.00 Each—regularly $35.00. Very fine Wilton Rugs in the size of 12 feet by 9 feet. For a varnished floor, or even a hardwood floor, there is no covering quite so admirable as a soft Wilton rug.

$48.00 Each—regularly $65.00. Imported One-Piece German Rugs in the beautiful patterns incident to the periods of Louis XV., Louis XVI., Empire and Renaissance. These are very large rugs, 13 feet by 10 feet. There are only 18 of them, which will be closed out for $48.00 each.

White, Autumn Vestings ⅓ Regular Prices.

The most inveterate shopper seldom runs up against a bargain like this.

Fashionable Autumn Vestings for the Autumn and Winter shirtwaists and a fraction of the regular price to pay.

25c a yard for 75c qualities of mercerized Vestings, Jacquards and Oxfords.

Raincoats for Men, Women, Girls

No city in the country needs the raincoat more than Pittsburg; no city in the country has to do with such London fogs as this city has; no city is favored with more humidity than Pittsburg—and thus it is that Mr. and Mrs. Pittsburg and the young Pittsburgs need a raincoat at all times.

Raincoats today are worth 100 cents on the dollar, which means that manufacturers can hardly supply the demand. Yet, notwithstanding this fact, we are enabled to offer Raincoats for less prices than they are usually sold. We'll take pleasure in proving this to anyone.

Women's Raincoats—

$7.75 Worth at least $15.00. Two styles of Raincoats in two different materials. One style is made of a gray and white mixture, the other an oxford gray, both all wool. One style has a cape effect and loose belted back—the other has no cape, just a plainly tailored and effective raincoat, with full sleeve and turnover cuff.

$10.75 One of the best coats we ever had for the money. Made of cravenetted oxford and tan fabrics, the style being pleated and belted back, flat collar, full sleeve, the front is made double-breasted, forming a deep box pleat.

$13.75 Raincoats made of all-wool invisible checked cloth, the color combinations being white, black and gray. Single-breasted, fly front, notch collar; back is made with a wide box pleat and a two-piece half belt.

$15.00 Raincoats made of the celebrated cravenetted cloth have flat stitched collar and are double box pleated in back and front; full pouch sleeve. The colors, oxford and tan.

$15.00 Another lot of Raincoats—just 25—in several colors, about two of each color. These are samples, and are really worth $20.00. In fact they are being sold in town for that price.

$20.00 Two exclusive styles in Raincoats that are great values—one of cravenette cloth, oxford and tan colors; it is a box-pleated Norfolk effect, has double capes, flat collar, belted back; the other style is made of herringbone oxford, medium weight, has notch collar, box-pleated belt back, and it also has four new shaped patch pockets.

Girls' Raincoats—

$8.00 Sizes for 4 years and up to 14. Coats made of lightweight rainproof cloth in tan and oxford.

$9.50 and up to $15.00—sizes 4 to 14 years. Raincoats in lightweight cloth, olive, tan and oxford. These can be had with and without belt.

$9.50 Sizes 14, 16 and 18 years. Special line of Rainproof Coats in tan and oxford. Full back, double capes and belt.

$10.00 Young Ladies' Raincoats, having capes and notch collar. These coats are finished with belt. Tan and oxford gray.

$15.00 Young Ladies' Raincoats in mannish style — full box with belt. The color is tan.

If none of the foregoing are fine enough, raincoats will be found here in all the finer grades of cloth up to $40.00.

Men's Raincoats—

$18.00 and $20.00 We defy any man to find a raincoat in the city as good as either of these for less than $5.00 more. A raincoat should fit just as snugly as any other coat, and we pay particular attention to the fit of each raincoat that leaves this house.

$25.00 This is one of the finest Raincoats we have ever seen for the price, indeed we have been told by traveling men that the same coat sells for $35.00 in other cities. There is no duplicate of this $25.00 coat sold anywhere in Greater Pittsburg. It is a sightly coat, and fulfills all the requirements of an outer coat for any evening event. For rainy weather it is superb, shedding water with the same ease that a feather does.

Men's Mackintosh Raincoats at $7.50 and up to $13.50.

Monday, November 7, 1904.

Allegheny officialdom has shown its attitude toward the prosecution of graft, first by retaining Police Captain Wilson on duty, pending the sifting of the charges against him, and, second, by beginning proceedings against the principal prosecuting witness. This amounts to throwing down a gage of battle to the district attorney's office and there is reason to expect it will be accepted as such. The line of action is indicated by the declaration of Dr. Woodburn that the investigation will now go "higher up." Obviously that is the course to take. It is the apparent intention "higher up" to throw every possible obstruction in the way of the county legal machinery. That intention should be met by a determined attack all along the line. Graft has grown too bold.

Fears are expressed that the new capitol building at Harrisburg may not be ready for occupation by the legislature in January, and it is probable some measures may be taken by the building commission to hurry the contractors. The assembly rooms are well forward, and Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds James M. Shumaker believes they will be ready for his furnishings in time, but he expresses extreme doubts about the transcribing and committee rooms. This is a matter of importance to the whole state, and the contractors should be held to strict account in it. Inadequate facilities will cause delay in the legislative proceedings, and this will be expensive to the state. Moreover, unpreparedness will lead to makeshifts that are not only expensive but may involve permanent defects in the building.

Never in the history of Pennsylvania have there been so many gun accidents as this fall. Youthful "hunters" have been shooting each other in the woods and shooting themselves by dragging their guns. In addition to this there have been many deplorable home accidents in which children have gotten hold of loaded firearms and killed brothers, sisters or associates. There have been so many of these killings that some persons have been led to advocate the abolition of the practice of keeping weapons in the homes of the people. This is hardly a reasonable remedy. It could not be applied by law, for the constitution guarantees the right of the citizen to keep and to bear arms. The more rational procedure is to carefully instruct children, even of the tenderest years, in regard to the handling of firearms and the dangers inherent in them. Gun accidents were infrequent in pioneer days when the gun was oftener used.

Frequent note has been made of the quietness of campaigns, as if the people no longer had issues which they considered of sufficient importance to lose their tempers over them. It is a question, however, whether voters are any less serious over the questions to be decided at the ballot box every four years than they ever were. There is a greater intelligence and a more careful study of public matters and less liability to deception. The days of the parade and campaign torch are evidently passing, and appeals must be made more to the reason than to the prejudices. Once the independent was a very small fraction of the entire voting strength, but now he is found everywhere and must be reckoned with by every manager of elections. In spite of all attempts to "purify" party rolls, the number of voters who can be depended on to support the ticket is growing less every year. So the warning of Former President Cleveland about the influence of the first vote on a young man's subsequent career has not the force it might have had 25 years ago, for people are no longer afraid to bolt their party ticket and they have reason to expect a welcome when they return to the fold after wandering in search of the most suitable candidates.

The Russian authorities are apparently determined to adhere to the theory that there was a real attack upon the Russian squadron in the North sea made by Japanese torpedo boats, and that the fishing smacks were accidentally hit by getting in the line of fire. This theory is being bolstered up by recital of reports received by the Russian admiral from various sources that such an attack was impending. To make out this theory the torpedo boats should have been visible to others besides the Russian lookouts and some explanation is desirable as to what has become of them since. They could not have evaporated or have dived in the sea to go back to Japan without letting themselves be seen on the way. To give the theory any show of credibility it must be accompanied by the assumption that the British government has failed in the duties of neutrality by giving the Japanese boats a hiding place from which they sallied and to which they retreated. Reports making such charges are circulating in St. Petersburg and upon the continent. In corroboration of the assumption of British complicity the latest report put in circulation is that Admiral Togo telegraphed to the British admiral at Wei-Hai-Wei for shells and provisions which were furnished him. The effect of such charges is to cause great pains to be taken to make the British case complete and conclusive on this point. The British government will leave nothing undone to force the Russian government to produce proof or confess error. When the Russian theory is subjected to serious consideration in the proceedings before the international commission, it is likely to become a sorry farce.

Mr. Parker's Motive.

Mr. Parker has made an unique record, whatever the result of the presidential election may be. He is the only presidential candidate in all our history who sought to promote his own election by an assault upon the personal integrity of another presidential candidate. Since in the face of categorical denials made to his charges he is unable to give any proofs, the only feature of the case which still needs to be cleared up is the motive which prompted him to bear false witness against his opponent.

Light is thrown upon that when it is remembered that in the opinion of Mr. Bryan and the great mass of the Democratic party which follows his leadership, Mr. Parker is himself the exponent of corporation control in politics. When his candidacy was presented by the New York state Democratic convention, Mr. Bryan declared that "Judge Parker is not a fit man to be nominated either by the Democratic party or any other party that stands for honesty or fair dealing in politics." Commenting upon the trust plank in the New York platform, Mr. Bryan quite justly declared:

> The plank has no meaning as it stands, unless there is a secret suggestion that the regulation of corporations must be left entirely to the states. This is the position that is taken by the trust magnates. Whenever congress attempts to interfere with a trust the friends of the trust at once insist that the state must do the regulating.

Mr. Bryan further charged that the nomination of Parker would be "followed up by the debauching of the public with a campaign fund secured from the corporations, and it is to be consummated by the betrayal of the party organization and of the country into the hands of those who are today menacing the liberties of the country by their exploitations of the producers of wealth."

In the address which he issued after the action of the St. Louis convention, Mr. Bryan based his support of the ticket upon the ground that its success would accomplish some desirable objects, but that "a Democratic victory will mean very little, if any, progress on economic questions so long as the party is under the control of the Wall street element," and he declared that "the nomination of Judge Parker virtually nullifies the anti-trust plank." He concluded by saying that "the nomination was secured by crooked and indefensible methods."

Mr. Bryan has never retracted these charges nor has Mr. Parker ever attempted to refute them. In fact, the position he took upon the trust question has been exactly what Mr. Bryan predicted it would be. In his speech of acceptance he held that congressional control over corporations is unnecessary since "the common law as developed affords a complete legal remedy against monopolies." There is no common law of the United States, so that Mr. Bryan was perfectly correct in describing Mr. Parker as champion of the trust view that "the regulation of corporations must be left entirely to the states." And at the same time the fact is notorious that Mr. Parker's campaign has been in the hands of trust magnates. On Saturday night he rode in the same carriage with Senator McCarren, known as a trust employe, in going to the meeting at which he delivered his latest speech on the subject of the trusts.

These facts are well known throughout the country and have attracted so much attention among Mr. Bryan's followers in the west that it has required all his eloquence to induce many of them to support the ticket even as a choice of evils, as he does himself. Mr. Watson, the Populist candidate, in his speeches has poured sarcasm upon this feature of Mr. Parker's candidacy. Stung by such comment and advised of its effect in alienating the support of thousands who cast their votes for Mr. Bryan, Mr. Parker evidently thought it would be a good stroke of policy to pass on to President Roosevelt the same class of charges, and gathering courage from the silence with which they were borne for a time, he went on with increasing vehemence until he fully exposed himself to the crushing replies of President Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou. He has dishonored himself and ends his campaign disgraced, as well as defeated.

The Place for Motor Racing.

Speed appears to be the accepted test of most every means of transportation. Ever since the rearing and training of the race horse became a business, efforts have been made to discover how fast he could carry his driver. When the bicycle was perfected there were tournaments to learn the capacity of the wheel to cover the ground. The automobile succeeded the wheel and in the meantime this curiosity to attain the possibilities of each means of locomotion has led to races between ocean steamships and the running of express trains at a higher rate of speed than considerations of safety warranted. Now the seeker after records is developing the motor boat and finds pleasure in splashing through the water at a rate once made by railroad trains.

It is a question, however, whether motor boat racing has not many advantages over the struggle of other vehicles to annihilate distance. The automobile racer sacrifices comfort as well as safety in driving his machine over the ordinary road or the regular track, for any accident is likely to result fatally on account of the certainty of impact with the earth or some harder substance. The motor boat, on the other hand, glides over water and the only inconvenience caused by the speed is the spray it throws on the passengers. Even this has been obviated to a large extent and it is said that a dozen people can travel comfortably in a boat that is making over 25 miles an hour. Unless the surface of the water is crowded with other boats there is little danger of injury through a departure from the course, while a good swimmer should feel safe in almost any emergency that might arise.

It is a question whether these considerations will not encourage wealthy men of leisure to turn their attention from automobiles to fast boats, whose speed seems to be undeveloped as yet. Hardly any sport could bring greater exhilaration to the participant than skimming over the complaisant water, which offers a dustless path and one easy to travel. No especial equipment is necessary for the protection of the captain of this species of speed maker and he can invite his friends to participate without the risk of mangling some unfortunate pedestrian as an incident of the sport.

Safety Fenders.

It is proposed by the East End board of trade to ask for a writ of mandamus to compel Director of Safety Moore to enforce the ordinance requiring street railways to equip their cars with safety fenders. This ordinance was passed finally in councils June 12, 1893, and approved by the mayor 10 days later. It is to be found in ordinance book, Vol. 8, page 225. It provides that after its approval "it shall not be lawful for any passenger railway company using the streets, lanes and alleys of the city of Pittsburgh to run any cars unless provided with the most modern improved pilot or safety guard, the same to be at all times attached to the front, or end in the direction which the car may be traveling, for the better protection of life and limb of the public, the same to be subject to the approval of the chief of the department of public safety, whose duty it shall be to see that the provisions of this ordinance are enforced and complied with." The second section of the ordinance provides penalties for non-compliance within 90 days from approval of the ordinance, the same being not less than $10 nor more than $50 for each succeeding 30 days of failure or neglect to comply.

As this ordinance was approved more than 11 years ago and no effort has ever been made to comply with its provisions—except by the road formerly managed by Director Moore—the street railways must owe the city quite a sum of money. The line with which Director Moore was connected actually operated basket fenders for a time and demonstrated their utility in saving life in several instances. But as other lines were permitted to ignore the ordinance that one gave up its fenders.

The movement of the East End board of trade to revive this regulation in the interest of public safety is commendable. It is right in line with the ordinances prohibiting passengers from riding on platforms and regulating the speed at which cars may be run. Its enforcement, after a lapse of 11 years, will come as a welcome proof that ordinances in the public interest are not wholly valueless, and will indicate the value of adopting the measures recently introduced, which have been specified. An ordinance not enforced is worse than useless.

Observe the New Ballot.

At the election tomorrow the voter will be confronted by the new form of ballot. It is an improvement over the old blanket once the voters become accustomed to it, but a word of caution is pertinent at its first appearance. The man who desires to vote a "straight" ticket must mark at the left side of the ballot instead of at the top as formerly. A mark in one of the squares at the tops of columns will vote the presidential electors alone. The candidates for other offices are grouped below, not in party columns, but under the titles of offices to be filled.

To vote an entire ticket by making one mark the mark must be placed in one of the spaces provided at the left hand end of the ballot. The first is for the Republican ticket, the second for the Democratic and so on in order from the party having the highest to the one having the lowest vote at the last preceding election. A moment's thought given to this matter may save a vote for candidates other than those for president and vice president of the United States. In Pennsylvania this is important, for while Roosevelt and Fairbanks will have thousands of votes to spare, some of the candidates for congress, legislature and judge and county offices will need the full party strength in their districts to assure election.

A successful start has been made toward providing a tuberculosis hospital for Pittsburgh, through the beneficence of William McConway. The Herron Hill site is admirably adapted to the purpose and the institution should prove of inestimable value to many unfortunates.

It is said all the thieves have abandoned their regular winter home in Allegheny, pending the graft investigation. If it shall prove that they have gone far enough away the investigation has already been of great benefit.

A correspondent says the English people were ready to fight the day after the trawler fleet was attacked. That hardly does justice to the situation. They would probably rather have gone to war than not.

To Hill and Parker must be accredited the revival of coarse personalities in presidential campaigns. After tomorrow they will know what the American people think of the retrogression.

There is a fair chance that the good offices of The Hague tribunal may be needed by Austria. When German and Italian students take to rioting it is almost worse than war.

Candidate Parker repeats the libel, but whether it is on the old principle of "a lie well stuck to," etc., or merely because he has nothing else to say is not explained.

Dr. Woodburn declares the Allegheny graft investigation is going "higher up." Paradoxical as it may seem, it will at the same time go to lower depths.

Resurrection of the fender ordinance after 11 years of disregard must strike the traction monopoly much as would the appearance of a ghost.

Chairman Cortelyou's final official declaration has all the calm assurance that might be expected in a man whose mind is at ease.

Gen. Kuropatkin's advance, started weeks ago, lacks seven or eight miles of its initial position on the southward road.

Uncle Gassaway declares West Virginia will go Democratic. He is due for an awful shock Wednesday morning.

Tom Taggart and Stoessel are in the same class—nothing left for them but to fall back on the Tiger's Tail.

New York reports $2,000,000 in election bets. There's a good bit of winter discomfort represented in that.

Just one more day to think it over before voting. But who ever did his thinking on the last day?

August Belmont at Democratic headquarters is assurance enough to the "trusts" from that quarter.

There are some signs of trouble in the principals association. Not ordinary school troubles, either.

Mr. Roosevelt has maintained his reputation as a hard-hitter.

Talked of in Gotham

By FRANK A. PARKER.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—George W. Miller and N. N. Ferren of Pittsburgh, who spent Sunday in New York after attending the football game at Philadelphia yesterday, took a ride in the subway this afternoon, and promptly saw a solution of the ventilation problem bothering the company. The subway now has an odor of washday in ordinary weather, and on murky days it is worse. Also the further downtown one goes in the subway the worse the atmosphere gets. The local newspapers have been variously discussing the subject, and one of them announced the other day the man who would purify the air in the subway should get a gold medal as well as a good price for the work. Messrs. Ferren and Miller, being in the business that requires attention to such details as ventilation, and being also well informed on conditions that obtain in mining regions, very quickly saw how the problem could be solved at a comparatively small cost.

"Suction fans, which cost about $200 each, would settle the trouble for all time," said Mr. Ferren this evening. "A six-foot fan placed at each street opening would change the air in the whole subway every 30 seconds. Therefore, the company need put in fans only at every other opening, which would give plenty of fresh air at all times. The expense would be trifling when compared to the entire cost of the tunnel, as the fans cost only about $300 each, and 500 of them, which it seems to me would be plenty, would cost only $150,000. That would remove all the smell of oil and would bring the oxygen up to normal. Now, I am told, there is only 50 per cent of the normal amount of oxygen in the air in the subway. Such a condition, if allowed to continue, is likely to result in much sickness. Conditions today were not as bad as I had been led to suppose, but they were bad enough. In cases of heavy weather they will be worse, but the real harm will come in the summer time, unless the trouble is remedied."

However, Messrs. Ferren and Miller are not likely to ask for the medal suggested. They are perfectly willing that the people of New York profit by their bit of advice.

The Tale of a Cat.

Messrs. Miller and Ferren, by the way, have been having an interesting time since they left Pittsburgh. In one case they did the Good Samaritan act without knowing it until after it was over. The two Pittsburghers were guests at the Hotel York. About midnight they decided to take a little stroll before retiring. Four squares from the hotel they discovered a cat that looked friendless and homeless. "It's a shame to allow the poor cat to starve," suggested one of them. "Let's take it up to the hotel and give it a square meal for once in its life." So by much coaxing they finally corralled the cat and, returning to the hotel, asked one of the waiters to produce supper for the wanderer.

"Where did you find him?" inquired the waiter when the cat was put down on the floor. "That's the hotel cat, and it has been missing for a month." Puss has been busy today whenever the two Pittsburghers have been in the hotel, as he promptly decided he belonged to his rescuers.

And Such Is the Road to Fame.

A versatile press agent can make a name for a star with very little raw material to build from, so it is not surprising that talented artists gain a name very rapidly in these latter days. As an example a young woman is to begin her career as a comic opera star in New York tomorrow evening, with a reputation for beauty, grace and talent that is spread all over the city, notwithstanding the fact that she has heretofore only appeared in the front rank of the chorus. The girl in question is Anna Fitzhugh, the prima donna of "The Baroness Fiddlesticks."

The authors of the piece burst upon the Rialto a few months ago with a bunch of money and a desire to see their names in three-foot type spread upon "the dead walls of the city." McDonald and Sullivan, the managers, who up to the present have been mere press agents, have done the rest. Now there is the "Anna Fitzhugh hat," the "Anna Fitzhugh cloak," and the "Anna Fitzhugh everything" wearable by women. Miss Fitzhugh comes into New York the best advertised star who ever began a metropolitan career. Certainly she has the beauty and the grace. You will know more about the talent later.

Landlords Get the Benefit.

Reverting to the subway, the people downtown who figured on going a little farther out and securing good apartments at a lower rent than formerly, reckoned without their hosts—or rather their landlords. It has long been the dream of the renter that the completion of the subway would be a boon. But the landlords have outwitted them. Ever since the day the subway opened rents have been on the increase in Harlem. Flats that could have been had for $30 a month a few weeks ago now bring from $40 to $50, and the real estate men are advertising the great advantages to be gained by living within a few blocks of a subway station. And there seems to be no relief. The rents downtown are no lower, and it does not seem that the other means of travel are less crowded since the advent of the subway. The only solution seems to be to buy an automobile and move to Jersey. And autos will be cheaper afterwhile.

The Charges Fall to the Ground.

It is well known that Mr. Roosevelt speaks the truth when he says in his indignant reply to Judge Parker's grave accusations that Mr. Cortelyou was taken from the cabinet to manage the national campaign only after Elihu Root, W. Murray Crane and Cornelius N. Bliss had been successively urged to do that work. This being true and susceptible of proof, the elaborate theory that the department of commerce and labor was established to intimidate the trusts for campaign purposes and was headed by Cortelyou to qualify him for the job of blackmailer falls to the ground. It is a pity that Judge Parker, yielding to the strong pressure brought upon him by his advisers, has given countenance to these wholly gratuitous charges.—Chicago News (Ind.).

A National Humiliation.

The issue as now made up is vividly distinct. Either the presidential candidate of one party is a blackmailer for partisan purposes or the candidate of the other party is a slanderer for partisan purposes. And this issue, humiliating to the nation in either alternative of its decision, has been forced upon the country by that candidate who at the outset proclaimed the elimination of all personalities from his campaign.—Washington Star (Ind.).

The Quiet Observer.

By ERASMUS WILSON.

What think you: Should school teachers marry, or just go on teaching?

This is becoming one of the questions of the hour, and one that won't down.

And well it may be regarded as a grave question when as many as six teachers in one school resign their positions and marry during one term.

The fact that each and every one of these held up her pretty hand and affirmed that she knew nothing of it when she hired herself to teach for a year does not alter the case as far as the school is concerned.

If only one school in the two cities suffered loss in this way it would be bad enough, but when every one, or nearly every one, loses some of its choice teachers every year is it any wonder that school boards are trying to devise ways and means to circumvent little Lord Cupid?

But he is a slick one, don't you forget, and mighty hard to beat.

As the case now stands it is wit and wisdom against love.

For whom shall the verdict be?

Anyone who has had a regular set-to with Cupid will hardly fail to pick him for a winner, no matter how wise, or how powerful, or how determined school boards may be.

* * * * *

Nor are marrying teachers without aid and support on their side, for there are substitute teachers, and these are not averse to regular teachers getting married, since it makes business for them.

Possibly these might be induced to take the regular teachers' place at the altar.

Wonder if school boards have ever thought of this? These substitutes are regularly elected and as much subject to call and to assignment as are regular teachers.

Then why not call them up and assign them to the vacancy at the hymeneal altar? A few dollars invested in orange blossoms, silver spoons, soup outfits and the like might prove a good investment, in that it saved to the school a good teacher.

No doubt such an arrangement would suit the substitutes—some, at least—but the regulars might object, and when a woman objects, why, she objects, and with womanly persistency continues to object.

However, school boards might act on the suggestion, and if without success they would be none the worse off.

If each school board had a female member or two this scheme might be made to work all right, particularly if these were ex-teachers and familiar with the ropes. And all the better if they had broken engagements with school boards in order to marry, and had reasons for being sorry for it afterward.

* * * * *

Another scheme which might prove effective would be to compel teachers who marry during the term for which they had bound themselves to complete the term.

If the man who breaks away from his job to marry a teacher can return to it, why shouldn't a teacher be permitted to do likewise, or even be compelled to do so when under a definite contract to serve for a given time?

Surely teachers have a perfect right to marry, but right things done at wrong times are as bad as wrong things done at right times. And no less surely are teachers bound to give their best efforts to the schools placed in their charge.

Nor is this whole thing a big joke, or a bit of jolly good fun. On the contrary, it is quite a serious matter, and one that should receive most serious consideration by teachers when an opportunity to become engaged is offered.

Engagements will keep for a longer period than a school term—that is, engagements that are worth while—and no right-minded school board will object to teachers becoming engaged, not even if they should find it out.

Some teachers might be afraid its fellow would break away if not tied up tight and fast before he had time to change his mind.

Such as these are apt to break away anyhow, and it were better to give them a chance before subjecting them to the tying-up process.

* * * * *

Dear Q. O.—Why shouldn't the school teacher have as good a chance to marry as any other woman?

The young man who propounded the question as to whether he had better marry a school teacher is evidently giving the question of entering into that life partnership known as marriage some thought.

That is excellent when one views the rush that sometimes is made to the altar and the indecent hurry that often marks the severance of the marriage ties.

There are more good reasons for marrying a school teacher than there are against such a course, if the young man is really in love and contemplating the making of a home. That he asks the question signifies nothing of uncertainty. He apparently wants to go into the matter with his eyes as wide open as he can get them.

Of course there are two sides to the question. He may feel that he is not at all certain that the teacher in view may answer "yes" to his question. He feels that he wants her, and he desires to know fully beforehand how desirable she may be, and have every argument that he can to win her over to his side of the question.

She knows how to work. That is evident to anyone that has given school teaching the most casual thought. Some may object that school teaching prevents her from having a knowledge of housework. Don't you think she would soon learn?

For illustration; Consider how many things a teacher has to learn. Music is quite a fad in many schools. Many of the teachers know nothing of it. They are called upon to teach it. They do so with satisfaction to the school board. One may argue that they teach incorrectly. Well, ought a husband be harder to suit than a school board?

Let a teacher say that she thinks that the children are being pushed ahead faster than they should be to cover a mechanical amount of space in the books. Some director spreads the report of a "lazy" teacher, and she loses her job. She has to pursue her work as the school board and principal plans it out. These courses mostly are made by men of intelligence and learning, but ambition carries them frequently out of sensible bounds.

The teacher should have, according to most school boards, no opinions of her own.

Opinions are incubated by the school board, fed by the principal to a growing stage, and attended by the teachers, who are expected to stuff them into the pupils. If they sicken both teachers and pupils and an outcry is made, the directors meet hastily and pass resolutions that the schools "were never better," although some of the teachers are hanging back.

So the young man who marries a teacher gets a woman whose opinions and actions have been directed by a man or set of men, and who is used to being bossed by a man.

Of course, after she is married she may change matters considerably. She has been deprived of the expressions of her own beliefs for so long that she may have an extra attack of them, for she knows that now she won't lose her job if she says what she thinks.

But if the young man is discreet and gives her the reins for a little while he will discover, nine times out of ten, that he has made no mistake.

Answers to Correspondents.

David Burleigh, Oxford, Washington county, Pa.—You can qualify and vote under certain circumstances. If you can qualify in strict accordance with the statute, the presence of the tax receipt itself is not essential. When you have complied with all the other requirements of the election law, and have either mislaid, lost or cannot lay your hands on the receipt for your taxes, paid within two years of the election, Paragraph 3 of the act of assembly passed February 13, 1874, provides a remedy. It reads: "If such person does not produce such receipt, then the payment of the tax may be proved by the oath of such person or other evidence stating when, where and to whom such tax was paid." This act regulates elections. It is much easier, however, to request the person to whom you paid your tax to send you a duplicate, which can be secured without extra expense and in time to permit you to cast your ballot, without having to go to the trouble of trying to remember the data. The fact that you can vote, however, was determined, in this instance, by both the Republican and Democratic county chairmen of Allegheny county, T. J. Ford and T. B. Alcorn, both of them well known attorneys.

Representative George E. Foss of Illinois has gone to Massachusetts to take part in one of the most interesting congressional campaigns in the country. He will stump what is known as the "Back Bay" district of Boston, where his brother, Eugene Noble Foss, is the Republican candidate for congress. The latter is one of the wealthiest manufacturers in Boston and, like his brother from Illinois, fought the Republican machine in his district until it was forced to give him a regular nomination for congress.

Representative Sydney Mudd of the Fifth Maryland district declares his negro voters have mastered the problem of the "trick" ballots, and that he will not lose any considerable number of votes because of the bewildering efforts of the Democrats to encompass his defeat. In years past Mr. Mudd has taught his illiterate constituents to recognize the initial letter "S" or the combination of letters that spell "Mudd." This year, however, the Democrats have nominated two Mudds and a Sydney for congress. Not to be daunted, the Fifth district representative opened up his schools for voters, and the eyes of the negroes were trained to recognize the full name, "Sydney E. Mudd." Mr. Mudd says they have accomplished the task, and will be able to mark their ballots properly on election day.

"The election of Senator Fairbanks to the vice presidency," says Mr. H. G. Brower of Terre Haute, Ind., "will break up an exceedingly odd senatorial combination, the like of which cannot probably be duplicated. In the first place, both our senators are from the same town, a fact not in itself so unique, but, furthermore, they are both members of the same church. Here is a double coincidence that I imagine to be without parallel. Now, with Mr. Fairbanks out of the senate, Indianapolis is not at all apt to have both the senators. Some of the smaller towns will give Mr. Beveridge a colleague, and it is also probable that the new man may be of a different religious faith."

"The defeat of Judge Parker this week," says a correspondent of the Washington Star, "will be the signal for a greater battle in Kentucky than the presidential campaign is now producing. The Bryanites are sitting back and looking on, saying to the men now in control of the party machinery, 'You must make good or get out.' A big fight is inevitable, as the old silver men are sure to attempt to wrest the party organization from the present managers. Any slump in the Democratic vote in Kentucky will aid them in their endeavor, and they will not be slow to make use of the same to illustrate the incompetency of those now running affairs. The present party management is not popular, and a new set of men will seek to control its destinies. Blackburn will lead the fight for reorganization and his political future will be one of the stakes fought for. The silver men are even now preparing for the test of strength and are confident of victory."

\+ \+ \+ \+

One of Judge Parker's friends at Democratic state headquarters says: "Judge Parker is the greatest politician in the Democratic party. His eleventh-hour appearance on the stump was his own idea. He did not ask the advice of any man. He planned his speaking for the last days of the campaign, so the Republicans would not have time to make a general answer to his statements. He is a great politician." Some Democratic politicians are doubtful of the political wisdom of the candidate waiting until the last week of the campaign to make speeches. They say that he should have made his speeches in time for the voters to study them.

Writing from New York to the Chicago Record-Herald, Walter Wellman predicts that Roosevelt will carry New York state by a plurality of from 25,000 to 80,000. If it turns out to be near the smaller figure, he says, Herrick, the Democratic candidate for governor, will win; if it approximates the larger figure he thinks Higgins will be elected. He sums up the probable result of the voting next Tuesday as follows: Greater New York, from 105,000 to 125,000 plurality for Parker; up-state, from 150,000 to 165,000 plurality for Roosevelt; minimum plurality for Roosevelt, 25,000; maximum plurality for Roosevelt, 60,000.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By REV. J. HENRY SMYTHE, D. D., LL. D.

In the crises of history and the swirl of battle great men appear because the pivotal moment calls them. When liberty puts the clarion trumpet to her lips and sounds a note of wild alarm, then a man answers, "Lo, I come." The time came when this nation's life hung by a thread; when freedom's empire was well nigh lost, and in that hour of dire extremity, God's hour of resplendent opportunity, help came. Grant, the invincible, appears and leads a million men to victory. It was the triumph of capacity, and today Grant's fame shines in the constellation of the ages.

* * * * *

History shows that Roosevelt is living in a crisis, and is a man born for crucial moments in the chemistry of nations. Some men are fitted for epoch-making—sinewy to withstand the fury of tremendous onset. Washington, Lincoln, McKinley—these men seem to have been molded in colossal matrices for unusual service and superior destinies. Roosevelt has hung his blazing orb so high as to have become a luminary of the world. He is a great captain, a man of splendid genius, and under his leadership lie unknown possibilities of good. He drives like a tornado at the enemy's center. The shortest way to hit the mark is his line of advance. He knows his country and his time. He holds his finger on the nation's pulse. He is no Fabius. He fought to win; he fights to win again. His is no half-hearted battle. He bares his blade to smite with all the strength that slumbers in his arm. He knows no defeat. His party can advance with victory burning on its banners. He is a pride to the nation, a glory to the world.

* * * * *

Suppose he had not been. Where was there a man between the two oceans to whose hands the people would have felt safe in entrusting the scepter of power? We have often thought had the solitary biographer of the Christ been Annas or Caiaphas, what distorted features of the Lord would we behold. We have other and truer and therefore fairer pictures. They who loved Him spake of Him as He was. Strange that those who can scarcely marshal words meet for the task of reviling Roosevelt find no difficulty in indorsing politics that amount to a magnificat of sin. It were well to preserve a semblance of fairness in discussing world issues. Better Moses than Pharoah, better Elijah than Ahab, better Paul than Nero—better Theodore Roosevelt than Tammany hall.

Greatest Bird Collection.

J. Warren Jacobs of Waynesburg has been awarded a medal at the world's fair for a collection of birds' nests and eggs which was sent to the exposition. He is a great naturalist and has made the collection through a lifetime of investigation. It is said to be one of the most complete extant.—Connellsville Courier.

J. O. BOCKSTOCE AGAINST BOOTH

City Administration Will Run an Independent Candidate in Twenty-Second Ward.

FOURTH DISTRICT SITUATION

Protesting that they are ardent Republicans, the city administration and the Citizens party's leaders intend to run a candidate for common council in the Twenty-second ward against Frank P. Booth, the Republican nominee. As it will be a special election, held about a week after the national election, when Republicanism theoretically will not be rampant, Mayor Hays, Murry A. Verner and Director Bigelow hope to be able to elect a councilman who will cast his lot with them.

J. Oslin Bockstoce has been picked out by the administration to run against Booth. Dr. Bockstoce said yesterday that he was not aware of such a program, but the fact is the administration intends to put him up as a candidate.

It is a cunningly conceived scheme. The Citizens party, in its present notion, intends to try to vote its adherents at the Republican primaries in January, and is even considering an appeal to the courts to force the primary election boards to recognize Citizens as Republicans entitled to a vote. If a Citizens candidate were put up in the Twenty-second ward that would render impossible all attempts of Citizens' adherents resident in that ward to vote at the primaries, therefore, officially, Dr. Bockstoce will not be the administration's official candidate, but will run for council as an "Independent."

Dr. Bockstoce is a dentist, lives at 500 South Linden avenue and has an office at 524 Penn avenue. He is well known in the ward and was prominent in advocacy of the Citizens party's cause. He is a friend of J. Smiley Wightman, president of select council, and of John F. Steel, who was nominated by the Republicans, indorsed by the Citizens and elected to common council, afterward acting with the administration, and being rewarded with an appointment as city treasurer. Mayor Hays will issue a proclamation today calling a special election, probably for November 17.

The Democrats hardly hope to save a single one of the legislative districts in the county. In past elections a Democrat was invariably elected to the legislature in the Fourth district, but the chances of E. J. Kirby, the Democratic nominee, against Henry Godfrey, the Republican candidate, are considered very small. Kirby is from the Fifth ward and Godfrey is from the First. Of all the Democratic candidates formerly successful none came from the First ward, and Democrats consider it highly probable that the feeling of First warders, that a man from their midst should go to the legislature, will make enough votes for Godfrey to elect him over his opponent.

The great meeting in Old City hall and the parade on Saturday, practically closed the work of the Republican campaigners. A good many of the ward associations may meet tonight to study the election laws and give instructions for election day work, but there will be no more speechmaking of any account. The Republican estimate of 60,000 majority for Roosevelt and Fairbanks in the county still holds good.

AERONAUTS PROTEST AGAINST SPEED RULE

Declare 20-Mile Requirement in World's Fair Contest Is an Unreasonable One.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6.—Unless the weatner interferes, the greatest demonstration of airships in the history of the world will take place at the world's fair aeronautic concourse, beginning tomorrow.

Housed in the aerodrome are five flying machines, embodying as many different principles, and varying in size from the monster airship invented and built by Hippolyte Francois of Paris, with its immense gas bag containing 65,000 cubic feet of hydrogen gas, to the comparatively small balloon belonging to A. L. Reynolds of Los Angeles, Cal., which, when fully inflated, has a capacity of only 3,000 cubic feet.

Tomorrow the first flight is scheduled in the contest for the grand prize of $100,000, offered by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company under the following conditions:

Concourse to be "L" shaped, start to be made at the angle of the "L" and the length of the full course not less than 10 miles nor more than 15.

Number of trials allowed, unlimited, but each competitor must make the full course at least three times.

The winning time shall be the average of the three best trips, providing that this average time shall be at least 20 miles an hour.

The last qualification has so far proved the stumbling block to the aeronauts now at the world's fair. They claim the rate of speed prescribed is excessive and impossible to maintain for so great a distance. M. Francois, however, declares the requirement will not affect his chances.

Capt. Baldwin announces he will instruct his navigator to sail over an arranged course for a test of the speed his airship is capable of developing, and upon the outcome of this trial will rest his entry for the grand prize.

SOUBRETTE WON OVER MOB OF EGG-THROWERS

Turned Crowds Wrath Against Manager by Rehearsing Actors' Hard Luck Story.

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

IRWIN, Nov. 6.—Incidental to the strike of a dramatic company here last night, there was a lively scene on the street in front of the opera house.

The company was billed to play "Nick Carter, the Demon Detective." Only a small audience was present and it grew impatient when the curtain did not go up at the usual time. Then there was a demonstration in front. The manager announced some of the actors had "laid down" on him and there would be no performance. Money would be refunded at the box office he said.

There was a rush from the house, and nearby stores had a call for eggs. As the stage people turned into Main street the "fruit" was sent whizzing close to them.

One of the actresses, styled "Miss Molly Magill, singing and dancing soubrette," addressed the crowd and told them no salary had been paid for eight weeks and "if you must throw eggs, throw them at the manager."

The speech had the desired effect and the party proceeded to its hotel unmolested. The egg throwers waited for the "manager," but he had received a "tip," and slipped from the house unnoticed.

POWDER STORAGE HOUSES THREATENED BY FLAMES

The Second ward fire department of Carnegie was called out at 6 o'clock last evening to fight a fire in the woods on the hillside near the Carnegie car barn. At the top of the hill are two powder storage houses owned by a mining company. The flames were extinguished before they had reached the top of the hill. The fire is supposed to have been started by boys.

SAYS STRIKE SAVED OVER 200 LIVES

WILKESBARRE, PA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—The report of Chief Mine Inspector Roderick shows the mine workers' strike of 1902 saved by comparison with last year, 218 lives and severe injuries to 634 men and boys. While the loss of life in ... last year was 518 and 1,325 in... 1902, the strike year, it was only ... killed and 614 injured.

BOUGHT FARM AND KILLED HIMSELF

Found in Barn With Throat Cut. Boy's Fatal Fall Down Cliff.

WORKMAN CRUSHED TO DEATH

Two cases of violent deaths were brought to the attention of the coroner yesterday, in which there were features out of the ordinary. Edmund M. Murray, young, happy in his home life, blessed with a comfortable competence and apparently in the best of health, was found in his barn in Pine township with his throat cut. The verdict at the inquest was that he had committed suicide while temporarily insane, although when he left his family a few hours before he was apparently as well as usual.

The death of young Joseph Paden hardly has a parallel in this vicinity. While sitting in a rocking chair in a yard which overlooks the Baltimore and Ohio tracks, the chair overturned and with the boy in it rolled over the bluff, 150 feet, onto the tracks. He received such injuries that he died at Mercy hospital yesterday.

Murray was 38 years old. He had been employed in the Westinghouse works until recently, when he bought a farm in Pine township and had just taken possession of it. Murray took the greatest interest in the arrangement of his home. The old log house which had stood on the farm for more than a century had, under his handicraft, been transformed into a modern dwelling. While the improvements were being made the family lived with Mrs. Murray's father near Wexford. Finally the home was ready and Murray took his wife and three children there on Saturday.

Murray Had Killed Himself.

While Mrs. Murray cooked the first meal in the new home the husband went on an errand. When he had not returned at 6 o'clock the wife became uneasy. Finally a search was made and the husband was found lying on a pile of straw in his barn. His throat had been cut, and the razor with which he had done the deed lay beside him.

Murray was still living, although very weak from loss of blood. He was carried into the house and a physician summoned, but nothing could be done for him. He died at 11 o'clock that night.

Young Paden's father lives at 35 Gist street, and the children of the neighborhood have been in the habit of gathering in the yard of a house at Bluff and Gist streets for play. They were there in numbers on Friday when Joseph rolled over the hill to his death. The back of the yard slopes toward the declivity above the railroad tracks. Joseph sat in a rocker and rocked so vigorously that the chair tilted over backward with him. The yard is divided from the bluff by a fence in which there was an open gate. By a strange chance the chair and boy shot through the single opening and fell 150 feet over the bluff. The boy's arms and one leg were broken.

The body of Henry Clerget was identified at the morgue yesterday by his wife, Mathilda Clerget of New York city. While at a ball in Turner hall, Allegheny, last week Clerget burst a blood vessel, dying at the Allegheny General hospital. He was a bartender. Arrangements were made by Mrs. Clerget for burying her husband here.

Laborer Buried Under Cement.

John Andree, an Italian, aged 25, employed by contractors building the Pennsylvania elevated freight line along Duquesne way, was killed at 7:30 o'clock last night while loading his wheelbarrow with bags of cement, which he was hauling to a cement mixer at Ninth street and Duquesne way. Several hundred bags of cement were in one pile and about 25 of these fell down and buried Andree. There was no witness to the accident, but another workman found the bags dislodged and suspected what had happened. Andree, when taken out, was unconscious and bleeding at the nose and mouth. His left leg was broken. He died before a physician reached him. He lived in Webster avenue.

A coroner's jury at McKeesport gave a verdict that the death of Mrs. Mary L. Austin, aged 27, of Hays station, was due to blood poisoning, caused by an operation. Mrs. Austin leaves a husband and three children.

Murder is the theory of the McKeesport police for the death of Andrew Hudacky, whose mangled body was found yesterday morning on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad tracks in McKeesport. Hudacky leaves a widow in Austria, and it is believed that he drew money from a bank on Saturday, intending to visit his old home. His wallet was found beside him empty. The police believe he was murdered and his body placed on the track.

GENDARMES KEPT PEACE AT PREZZEY'S FUNERAL

Austrian Artist Who Was Stabbed to Death Is Buried With Imposing Ceremony.

[Associated Press Cable to The Gazette.]

INNSBRUCK, Nov. 6.—The body of the Artist Prezzey, who was stabbed through the heart with a bayonet during the rioting here the night of November 3, was buried this afternoon in the Innsbruck cemetery in the presence of a great crowd and with an imposing ceremony. Perfect order was maintained. A strong force of gendarmes kept the route clear and large detachments of troops were held in reserve.

The city council decided the funeral should be at the public expense and black flags were hung on all public buildings. The coffin was followed to the cemetery by the burgomaster, members of the city council, the rector of the university, members of the academic senate and student clubs carrying flags. The coffin was hidden under masses of wreaths. Burgomaster Greil and Deputy Shalk delivered orations at the side of the grave.

After the funeral crowds promenaded the streets singing German patriotic songs, and 3,000 people assembled in Maria Teresa street, where the Deputies Berger and Stein delivered inflammatory addresses. The police interposed, and the two deputies fled to the station, where they took train for Vienna to avoid arrest.

A good deal of excitement prevails throughout the city, but there is no disorder tonight.

FIXING DETAILS OF BIG STATION

Pennsylvania Management Has Nearly Completed Plans for East Liberty Depot.

BRUSHTON STATION A PUZZLE

Details are now being worked out with great care in the plans for the East Liberty station of the Pennsylvania railroad. The general plan for this station has been approved and the appropriation for its erection provided by the Pennsylvania railroad board. There remains only the completion of numerous smaller considerations that enter into a design of this magnitude.

Robert Pitcairn, resident assistant to the president of the Pennsylvania railroad, said yesterday he expected to see the work of constructing this station started with the return of good weather next spring. Now that the railroad company has secured from the city all the needed authority in the matter, it is the intention to lose no time to complete a station which they expect to be second to none in its convenience and second to few in its size.

"The Pennsylvania will do anything for East Liberty," said Mr. Pitcairn.

The operating officials and those of the passenger department, as well as the railroad company's engineers and architects, are all being given an opportunity to criticise every feature of the structure that affects their end of the company's management. The purpose in this is to insure the structure being, when completed, satisfactory in all respects, and it is believed that whatever delay in starting the construction work may be occasioned by this policy is more than compensated for by the perfection of the completed building.

It can be stated also the officials of the company are giving considerable attention to the protest against abandoning the Brushton station. The order has been issued to abandon the station on November 15, a week from Tuesday, and so far as any formal action has gone now, this order stands and will likely be made operative on that date.

The great petition shown by the residents of the Brushton district has not, however, been without its effect, and particularly so since the Brushton station is one of the best patronized on the suburban runs of the Pennsylvania's Pittsburgh division. The trouble there has been the yards, which could not be placed elsewhere, it was thought, and the operation of trains to serve Brushton patronage acted as a cause of much trouble to both freight and passenger service there. It may be possible to relocate the station or the yards or adopt some other plan which will give the Brushton people service.

One plan proposed is to locate the new Wilkinsburg station nearer the city. At the Penn avenue crossing a good location would be found, some urge, and in due time this will be formally considered by the proper officials.

HOUSES OF GOD WERE DEDICATED

St. James Episcopal and St. Pius Catholic Congregations Consecrate New Churches.

BOTH ARE FREE FROM DEBT

The dedication of the new St. James' Memorial Protestant Episcopal church, Kelly and Collins streets, Homewood, took place yesterday afternoon. The church was filled to its capacity and a large number had to stand during the services. The dedication was in charge of the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese, who was assisted by the Rev. Coleman E. Byram, rector of the church. The Rev. E. Livingstone Wells, Bridgeport, Conn., preached the dedicatory sermon. He was formerly pastor of St. Phillip's mission, this city, which was consolidated with the St. James congregation.

The history of the church was read by the pastor, who told of its organization more than 50 years ago. For a half century the congregation worshiped in a building at Penn avenue and Sixteenth street. The church was originally built for the benefit of mill workers and met with wonderful success.

The new church in Homewood was built at a cost of about $55,000 and the congregation enters it free from debt. It is of white sandstone and the interior is handsomely decorated and presents a beautiful appearance. The parish house, a handsome brick structure, adjoins the church.

Coadjutor Bishop Canevin yesterday dedicated the new St. Pius X. Roman Catholic church at McKeesport. The sermon was preached by Bishop Canevin at 10:30 o'clock. Previous to the ceremonies the bishop and the visiting priests, followed by members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and other orders, formed a procession from the residence of the Rev. Father Coyle, the rector of the church, where they described a circle around the entire building before entering.

At the close of the sermon money and subscriptions enough were received to more than defray the cost of the new $16,000 building. Last evening the church was again filled at solemn vespers, after which a sermon was delivered by the Rev. Father F. F. O'Shea of Sewickley. The new congregation was formed a year ago from St. Peter's, which had become too large for one parish.

The First Church of Christ of Natrona was dedicated yesterday afternoon with the Rev. Dr. T. E. Cramblet, president of Bethany college, preaching the sermon. The Rev. William H. Wishart is pastor.

All-Saints day was celebrated yesterday in the Roman Catholic cemeteries near Millvale, Etna, Sharpsburg and the new St. Mary's cemetery in O'Hara and Shaler townships was blessed and dedicated with imposing ceremonies. The new cemetery, which includes more than 91 acres and several monuments, was blessed and dedicated by the Rev. Father Stephen Schramm, who also blessed the marble group of figures valued at $3,000, representing "Calvary," at the center of the cemetery.

The services were opened in St. Mary's church at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a sermon delivered by the Rev. Father Louis Spannagel, which was followed by a procession of more than 1,200 people, including the St. Mary's congregation, 600 children from the parochial schools, Sisters from the parish house, visiting clergy, children of the Virgin Mary and many Catholics from the different churches of the borough, led by the Sharpsburg Italian band.

When the new cemetery is completed a small lake will have been constructed, the overflow from which will irrigate the entire cemetery. A beautiful marble statue representing the "Immaculate Conception," will be placed in commemoration of the deceased priests, members of the Holy Ghost order.

CLAIM THE LEGISLATURE.

Democrats Declare They Will Have a Majority to Elect a United States Senator in Delaware.

WILMINGTON, DEL., Nov. 6.—About the most interesting development in the campaign in Delaware today is the claim of the Democrats that they will have a majority in the next legislature, which is to elect a United States senator to succeed Senator Ball, anti-Addicks Republican. They give no figures, but base their claim on defection in Republican ranks over the compromise candidate for governor. The Democrats still think their candidate for governor will be elected and that Parker has a good chance of carrying the state.

The Republicans claim the legislature and the state and national tickets, piecing President Roosevelt's majority at about 3,000.

Akron Has $60,000 Fire.

THE DEATH ROLL

George H. Davis.

George H. Davis, a member of an old Colonial family, once a prominent resident of Cincinnati and later of New York, died yesterday, aged 85, at the home of his son, Kington Davis, 807 Halket street. Mr. Davis retired from business many years ago. He was born in Boston on March 18, 1820. The Davis family came to America in 1664, and settled on a farm that is now the Arnold Arboretum, at Jamaica Plains, where the Davis homestead, 200 years old, still stands. Mr. Davis' mother was a Henchman, also an old Colonial family. Mr. Davis went to Cincinnati when a young man and married in 1846 Miss Child, whose family settled in Cincinnati in the city's early days. In the 60's Mr. Davis and his family went to New York city, and six years ago he, one year after the death of his wife, came to Pittsburgh. He is survived by three sons, C. C. of Pittsburgh, Walter J. of Colorado, and Rington. There will be no obsequies here, but the remains will be taken to Cincinnati and interred in Spring Grove cemetery.

GREAT ADVANCES OF TECH SCHOOLS

Director Hamerschlag Has Accomplished Much in a Very Short Time.

STORY OF THE WORK DONE

Just one year ago the board of trustees of the Carnegie institute announced to the people of Pittsburgh they had chosen Arthur Arton Hamerschlag of New York for the position of "director" of the Carnegie Technical schools. The position of "director," it was explained, is substantially that of "president," as the title is used in other educational institutions, and the office carries with it a latitude of authority which enables the director to mold the new educational institution along those lines which to him as an expert seemed those most fruitful of good results.

Mr. Hamerschlag came to Pittsburgh shortly afterward, and during the months of November and December was a frequent visitor, finally taking up his residence here early in the present year. Work, early and late, has been his almost unvaried daily record since that time and the achievements of the one year in which he has led, ably backed by the board of trustees and their committee on technical schools, are of monumental proportions. From a nebulous general idea of training workmen on a large scale into greater efficiency, the schools are now rapidly assuming a definiteness of purpose and of method which differentiate them from all other institutions of the same general character and give promise of a vastly broader usefulness than has yet been recorded in the annals of technical education.

How He Overcame Opposition.

There is only one answer given by those in touch with the work of the schools to the question, How were these results so rapidly and so satisfactorily accomplished? That answer is "The director's untiring energy and inexhaustable resourcefulness, combined with an honesty of purpose and natural tact in dealing with all who are brought into touch with him."

Immediately upon coming here Mr. Hamerschlag discovered that there existed a dangerous lack of knowledge as to his plans that threatened to handicap seriously their development. Now that the danger from one source has been removed permanently, it can be stated with safety that the union labor of the city, not to mention labor generally, was very dubious as to the outcome of these schools, and there was a strong tendency to believe that the real design was to educate a great number of nonunion men, skilled in the various trades, who would take the places of the present workmen.

Heroic measures and effective ones were used by Mr. Hamerschlag in eradicating this impression. In the first quarter of the year he addressed about 75 gatherings, the greater proportion of which were meetings of locals of various labor unions or other labor assemblages, and to each of these he told his plans with a directness that removed the incipient hostility toward the technical schools.

"The purpose of the Carnegie technical schools is not to make additions to the ranks of artisans. It is to make it possible for those in the various trades to improve themselves in such a manner as to render their services the more valuable," he said time and again.

"Skilled workmen cannot be made in a school. They are products of the workshop. What the schools can do is to give the men already engaged in the trades an opportunity to perfect themselves in the technical end of their work. This the Carnegie Technical schools will do."

In speaking to the labor unions Mr. Hamerschlag had the great advantage of a good knowledge of the various trades. As an engineer of extended experience, civil, mechanical and electrical, he was familiar with the technical points of the various trades and could discuss with the men every feature of their work. This gave them respect for his opinions and arguments, and contributed in no small degree to his success in securing, in place of hostility, the most friendly co-operation.

While making these addresses and becoming more and more familiar with local conditions, Mr. Hamerschlag was conducting another line of work which ended with equal success. The schools can be only what the prospective students wish to make them, he said, and from every available source he secured lists of persons who wished to pursue courses in the schools.

Labor Unions Gave Help.

From the various labor unions he secured the co-operation of committees to make suggestions as to the character of instruction they deemed best to help the men in the trade. These committees furnished him also with the names of many who wished to attend the school. From the public and private schools of Allegheny county came long lists of students who desired instruction in the "Tech," and from many manufacturing establishments came similar lists. East Liverpool sent a committee of its most representative pottery men to petition that he establish in that city a pottery school.

The result of this work was that he secured not only the united co-operation of every element of the citizenship of Greater Pittsburgh, but also applications from no less than 5,800 youths, men and women for instruction. Such a list in size and character was a revelation to the world of education. If the schools were to be opened all at once their enrollment would immediately make them the largest educational institution in the world.

Then came a further sifting of the material. In the Carnegie libraries, throughout the county, courses of lectures were given in many lines of technical education by men who in each case were well equipped to speak on the assigned subject. Tickets were issued to those lectures, which alone secured admission, and while these tickets were given free, they were so arranged that when the courses were completed the schools had a complete record of just what lectures were attended by each of those who had secured tickets. Much material for study as to the desires of those in the community who were really eager for technical education was obtained from this system and its use has obviated the necessity for other tests which could have been made only at much greater expense.

During all the time that the lectures were in progress the director and the "Tech" committee were considering the method of selecting an architect to build the home of the schools. The city of Pittsburgh had furnished an almost ideal site. Its surface was too rough, however, and in advance of the other work it was determined to reduce the grade to proportions that would allow more rapid work later on. This was done and has made possible the opening of the schools at least two months before they could otherwise have been started. This is but another instance of the director's foresight in an engineering way that has been a constant help in all the tasks.

It was decided to call to the help of the management of the schools an architectural adviser and by unanimous vote, Prof. Warren P. Laird of the University of Pennsylvania was asked to assume the work of advisory architect. Prof. Laird accepted the task and in co-operation with Director Hamerschlag worked assiduously upon the preparation of a "Program for an Architectural Competition" that has won wide recognition as an ideally fair plan and brought into the competition America's leading architects. The success of the "Tech" in securing suitable designs for its home was not in doubt from the time that the applications for admission to the competition began to arrive, and the outcome of this plan, announced only a couple of weeks ago, has shown how well founded was this confidence.

Plans Growing Very Definite.

The situation as regards the "Tech" at present is that a general scheme for the construction of its home has been adopted, and a firm of architects secured to build it. The courses to be given in the completed schools were outlined in the report of the committee of experts made two years ago. Director Hamerschlag was a member of the committee, it will be remembered, and another member was Prof. Clifford B. Connelley, Allegheny's famous superintendent of manual training, who has been the right hand of Director Hamerschlag in nearly every move that has been made in the "Tech."

The schools fall into five groups. Administration, School of Applied Science, School of Applied Design, School for Apprentices and Journeymen and Technical School for Women.

The matter now being rapidly settled is the limit of possibility in completing the detailed plans and constructing buildings for the schools to allow the start of instruction next October. Director Hamerschlag has set his mind firmly on having the first instruction in the "Tech" start at that time. The plan is to give a general introductory course of work for all day-students in the year 1905-06, to be followed by specialized training in subsequent years.

It is expected that a detailed announcement of the studies to be pursued in next year's courses will be made in a short time. The architectural plans will probably be announced at the same time.

During the year that Director Hamerschlag has been at the head of the Technical schools, he has been giving much constant attention to the subject of a faculty. This faculty, like the enrollment and the architectural features of the schools, will be a gradual growth, the developed needs of the school pointing out the directions of that growth, but in time there will be several hundred members of the faculty. From their residence here is likely to result a distinctly scholastic social atmosphere in Pittsburgh that will add greatly to the general cultural growth of the city.

Director Hamerschlag is looking far ahead at all times, but is never allowing his dreams of the school's future to permit a too sudden expansion. In his plans there has been marked steadily an almost revolutionary idea as to education and its best accomplishment.

For the customary kind of education that leaves a young man at the end of his college years the possessor of a diploma and destitute of the means of earning a living that will enable him to live up to the ideals he has formed, Director Hamerschlag has no respect. It is his idea and the one of which the Carnegie Technical schools will be the exemplar, that the first demand of nature's laws upon a man is that he shall be equipped with the means of self-support. The growth of his culture, the widening of his knowledge of nature's laws and his ideas of life can come later and will be the more thoroughly comprehended and the more truly made a part of himself, if his way to them has been over the rough and thorny road of hard work.

Director Arthur A. Hamerschlag.

EGGS OF SNAKES BEING HATCHED

State Economic Zoologist Surface Securing Information for Bulletin on Reptiles.

INCUBATORS ARE BEING USED

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
HARRISBURG, PA., Nov. 6.

Hatching snakes in incubators is the novel method being applied by State Economic Zoologist Surface to secure information for the proposed bulletin to be issued by the state department of agriculture on the reptiles of Pennsylvania. Dr. Surface has been incubating eggs of snakes and turtles the last three months, and he is more than pleased with the result of his efforts to ascertain certain facts about the habits of reptiles.

He says that it is not infrequent that the eggs of reptiles are found and sent to him with a request to identify them. It is very difficult to identify the egg of a reptile, from the fact that it is not marked by characteristic colors, as is the egg of a bird, and is not placed in a specially constructed nest which aids in the identification. Neither does the parental reptile remain near the place where its egg has been deposited.

Eggs sent from different parts of the state to Dr. Surface are placed by him in an incubator and kept at mild temperature until they hatch, for the purpose of determining the species of the reptile and learning as much as is possible concerning its habits. Owing to a lack of room and equipment in this city, the state zoologist makes use of the extensive facilities offered in the laboratory of the Pennsylvania State college.

Eggs of Another Species.

There was recently sent him from Washington, Pa., a number of eggs with the statement that they were probably blacksnake eggs, because they were found in a pile of sawdust upon which a large blacksnake was killed. When the eggs were sufficiently matured some were opened and found to contain not embryonic blacksnakes, but the young of another species of harmless snake, variously known as the hog-nosed adder, blowing viper, spreading adder or hissing adder.

This shows the necessity of obtaining reliable information regarding the reptiles of the state. In the course of development some eggs are saved in the various stages of development to show the series of steps through which the species passes in its development. After the snakes are hatched some of them are kept as specimens, others are kept alive to study their feeding habits and growth and others of the harmless species are turned loose to continue their beneficial work of feeding upon mice and snails. Among the specimens which have been sent to Dr. Surface some have contained mice and others toads, small birds, shells, beetles, squirrels and young rabbits.

Studying Lizards and Turtles.

Dr. Surface is studying not only the snakes, but also the lizards and turtles, of which Pennsylvania has several specimens. He says that while the eggs of snakes and turtles agree in being leathery and light in color, they differ in the fact that turtle eggs are nearly spherical, while snake eggs are more elongated or oval. It is not certain just what species of snakes lay eggs, but it is known that several, such as the rattlesnake, copperhead and garter snake bring forth living young.

Dr. Surface says, in commenting on a recent article in a Philadelphia newspaper, referring to supposed eggs of copperheads, that this is as absurd to the naturalist as it would be to uneducated persons to hear one speak of muskrat eggs. The doctor repeats his statement that there are no kinds of reptiles found in Pennsylvania that are venomous, excepting the rattlesnake and the copperhead.

Several persons have written him that the hissing adder, blowing viper or spreading adder are venomous and that he warn readers accordingly. He has several specimens of this serpent alive in his office and handles them with no danger. He says they have neither fangs nor poison glands, but simulate the actions of venomous serpents as a "bluff." The proposed bulletin will be issued by the department free of cost, preference being given to those persons who have aided in its preparation by sending specimens to Dr. Surface.

EXTREME PARTIES LOST IN ITALIAN ELECTION

Leader of Constitutional Opposition Failed to Secure Some Followers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

ROME, Nov. 6.—The general election for members of the chamber of deputies took place today, and up to midnight no serious incident has been reported. Results have been ascertained in about three-fifths of the constituencies, showing that the power of the extreme parties has been diminished, without, however, materially augmenting the number of ministerial followers, as most of the new recruits are Conservatives, who may be expected to soon abandon Premier Giolotti, a Liberal.

Sonnino, the leader of the constitutional opposition, has lost some of his followers, owing to the fact that Milan, which formerly was entirely represented by extremists, has elected two Conservatives, one Clerical and two Socialist-Reformists, one of whom, Turati, was supported even by the non-Socialists. As Turati, though a leader of the Socialist-Reformists, condemned the general strike, his election is regarded as a reply to that strike. Genoa, where the strike was most violent, overthrew the Extremists.

Ferri, the Socialist leader in most of the 40 constituencies, gathered only a few votes, especially where the Socialist candidates were competing with prominent politicians, as Minister of the Treasury Luzzatti, who had 1,886 votes out of 2,-000, and Ferri 105. The Clericals voted almost everywhere for Conservative candidates. Further returns and second ballotings next Sunday may considerably change the situation.

VLADIVOSTOK IS READY FOR THE JAPANESE

Has Constructed Strong System of Fortifications and Her Harbor is Mined.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

CHEFOO, Nov. 6.—As the result of months of preparation, Vladivostok is now strongly protected, according to Capt. Halvorsen of the Norwegian steamer Tungus, which arrived here five days out from that port with 700 Chinese refugees.

Capt. Halvorsen says the Vladivostok system of fortifications begins many miles outside the city proper, and grows stronger as the city is approached. Ships laden with food, cannon, ammunition and all sorts of military supplies frequently arrive at the port.

The captain says everybody at Vladivostok seems to be either an officer or an ordinary soldier. The European residents show their confidence in the security of the city by evidencing an unwillingness to leave it.

Capt. Halvorsen says the harbor of Vladivostok has been mined for seven miles. In four miles of this area contact mines have been laid, while in the remaining three miles electric mines have been planted.

Mail trains arrive at and depart from Vladivostok every day and there is now stored there an immense supply of coal taken from mines in the neighborhood of the city.

BRANDS RUSSIAN STORY AS ABSOLUTE FALSEHOOD

THE HAGUE, Nov. 6.—Nabtouka Mitsuhashi, the Japanese minister to the Netherlands, today denied absolutely the statement cabled from St. Petersburg, November 5, that he had organized an attack on the Russian Baltic squadron. If Russia should produce before the international commission a message purporting to have been sent by the Japanese minister "containing complete evidence that such was the case," Mr. Mitsuhashi said the document would be a forgery.

On Way to Baltic Fleet.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 6.—The Russian volunteer steamer Yaroslav, from Odessa with supplies of coal and water, has passed through the Bosphorus on the way to join the Russian Baltic squadron.

PRINCETON IS PREPARING FOR CHAMPIONSHIP GAME WITH YALE

YALE IS SURPRISED AT TIGERS' PLAYING

Penn Veterans Will Be Given Rest, Coaches Fearing Staleness.

HARVARD IS STILL HOPEFUL

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Nov. 6.—Yale was rather more interested today in the scores of Princeton and Harvard, made on Saturday, than in her own football score against Brown. The Elis hardly expected Princeton to get out of the West Point game as well as she did.

The result of the Harvard-Dartmouth game, however, was a big surprise. Yale had some of her best coaches at each of these games. Walter Camp and Field Coach Rafferty remained here in New Haven. Capt. Hogan's team did not do so well yesterday as had been expected, and the result has been much discussed today. Head Coach Robinson of the Brown team said today:

"Yale has a strong team, by far the strongest I have seen this fall. Yale's strength, however, lies in her defense. The defense is splendid, but the offense is not strong. Yale's offense does not hit the opposing team hard. To be sure, the Yale men keep their feet and keep moving for short gains, but I do not see why a strong team could not stop it."

Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Exuberant over the results of their game with West Point, the Tigers are preparing for a final week of hard work before the meeting with Yale. The coaches feel greatly encouraged over the general improvement manifest in the team work, and such faults as the struggle with the Army showed still exist will be corrected with greatest care in the short time that remains.

The defense still shows a certain amount of weakness, but not very much, considering that West Point made but one first down. It has improved so steadily in the past few weeks that it is no longer a cause of worry, and in the second half evidenced a strength no team has shown on this gridiron, judging by what has already been done, Yale will meet a barrier that will be worthy of her attack.

The ends, which were so slow earlier in the season, have developed great speed, and yesterday did some very fine work, getting down the field under punts, and generally reached the catcher almost as soon as the ball did. Rulon, Miller and Ritter have become very important parts of a back field that if not actually superior, is at least unexcelled among those of this season.

U. of P.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Although the University of Pennsylvania football team has not lost a game this season, nor had its goal crossed, the coaches are plainly worried over the troubles looming up before them this week. The problem they have to solve is that of keeping the team from going stale before finishing the season with the Indians and Cornell.

The after effects of the Harvard and Lafayette games are now beginning to tell on the veterans, and today the coaches gave permission for every member of the regular team who so desired to go home to vote and to remain until Thursday. Those who will not go home to vote, but who are in need of rest, have been ordered to the seashore for a few days.

Cornell.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Saturday's Lehigh game has proved another crippler for Cornell. Left Halfback Rice suffered such an injury to his knee that it is doubtful whether he will be able to play again this season. Coach Warner has also decided that he will play neither of his regular tackles in the New York contest. Both of them, Cook and Costello, are unfit for services.

Cook has been suffering from malaria fever, which requires that he be given a long rest if he is to be in shape for the game with Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving day, and Costello's knee, which was injured early in the season, was so banged up again by the Princeton game that he also will be kept on the side lines until the Quaker game.

Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Harvard will start out tomorrow on her last stretch before the struggle with Yale November 19. The game next Saturday with Holy Cross should not interfere greatly with the team's development, and there exists in Cambridge an unusually hopeful feeling that the Crimson can yet turn out an eleven that will lick the Elis in New Haven.

Except for the fact that Capt. Hurley hurst his ankle slightly against Dartsmouth, every Crimson player is in fine fettle. Moreover, the team is practically picked so that from now on every attention can be paid to the men individually and as a unit. Parker's work at center last Saturday stamps him as the man for the place. There is also little doubt that Pruyn will continue to hold down left end, for his work against Dartsmouth showed more promise than that of any other end candidate that has been on the field this year.

Manchester to Play Junctions.

The Manchester basketball team will play its second game of the season tonight at Rochester, meeting the Junction A. C. The game will be played at Junction park, on the outskirts of Rochester. A large delegation will leave the Fort Wayne station, Allegheny, on the 7 o'clock train. Thursday evening Manchester will play its first home game at Raleigh hall. Its opponents will be the Junctions.

AMONG THE PASSERS.

The All-Stars would like to arranke games with strong teams. Address John Meisel, 1501 Juniata street, Allegheny.

The Herron Hill team would like to hear from all first-class teams. Address George Shields, Box 451, Pittsburgh.

The Tom Thumbs of Manchester are out for the 11 and 12-year-old championship. Address Oscar Tuescher, 1725 Locust street, Allegheny.

The Friendship team wants a game for Saturday, November 19, with some strong junior team. Address Walter Irwin, 14 Alpine avenue, Allegheny.

All Fairbank players are to attend a meeting tonight at the residence of the manager, as they are to be measured for new uniforms. The Fairbanks have open dates. Write Andrew E. Long, 846 Conover street, Allegheny.

Two games will be played in each league this week. The first will be played Wednesday evening and will be between the Railroad Midgets and the Manchester Midgets of the Raleigh league, and the Fowler A. C. and the Railroad A. C. of the Manchester league on Saturday night the Tom Thumbs and Fayette Midgets and the Manhattan A. C. and Rambler A. C. will perform.

Devlin A. C. Is Disappointed.

The manager of the Devlin A. C. was disappointed with the non-appearance of the Allen A. C. Saturday. It looks, he says, as though the teams were afraid of the Devlins, as Pequot had canceled for that date also. The Devlins have the following dates open: November 19, 26 and Thanksgiving day, and would like to hear from any good 75-pound team. Address M. C. Brickmont, Montooth and Michigan avenues, city.

Ebbets Seeks Senatorial Honors.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—President Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn Baseball club, candidate of the Democrats for state senator in the Sixth district of Kings county, closed his strenuous campaign last night. Ebbets made a comprehensive canvass of his district and is confident of election.

AMATEUR FOOTBALL NOTES.

Through an error the statement was published that the Lynch A. C. defeated the Coughlin A. C. 6 to 5. The correct score was 5 to 6 in favor of the Coughlins, so claims the latter team.

The Lawrenceville A. C. is scheduled to play St. John's Lyceum November 12.

Prominent Players on Local Prep. School Football Elevens Who Are Doing Well

ALEX. M'CRACKEN, Shadyside Academy.

WORRELL, Pittsburgh High School.

CAPT. WYNN, East Liberty Academy.

BOTH JAWS ARE BROKEN BY A FIERCE TACKLE

Danner of Suburban Meets With Mishap, Zelch of Washington Bringing Him Down.

Fred Danner of the Suburban Athletic club football team, had both his jaws broken while playing in a game yesterday afternoon against the Mt. Washington A. C. on the Martin grounds, out the Castle Shannon railroad. Danner was tackled fiercely by Zelch of the Mt. Washington team while carrying the ball in the open field.

Zelch made a flying tackle and brought Danner down heavily, his knees coming in contact with his jaws. Danner and Zelch rolled over the field for quite a distance. A physician, who was watching the game, attended Danner. Zelch is a former player on the Pittsburgh High school eleven.

The accident happened in the first half, and in the second session the game was closed, due to the umpire awarding it to Suburban. Mt. Washington objected to an alleged offside play, for which it was penalized five yards. Suburban got the game on the umpire's decision, 5 to 0.

WALTHOUR RETURNS HOME.

Middle Distance Champion Won Forty Races in Europe and Brings Back $15,000 in Cash.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Bobby Walthour of the Columbia racing team has started training for the six-day bicycle race, to be held in New York beginning December 5, and, with Benny Munroe as a partner, expects to repeat his victory of last year.

The blonde lad returned from Europe last week after a phenomenal season's work, during which he won something like $15,000. He crossed on August 4 and returned wearing the medal of the world's middle distance championship, which he won at the Crystal Palace track in London.

"During the past year I started in 44 races and won 40 of them," said Walthour. "Accidents caused most of my losses, although I was beaten fairly by Leander in the first race after I got off the boat. Since Leander's lamentable accident in Paris, which caused his death a day or two later, the authorities have barred wind shields, and now the pace followers have to travel behind stripped machines handled by riders wearing tight-fitting jackets. I might say that after Leander was killed I started wearing a headgear, similar to that used by the football players, and I know that it saved my life, on one occasion at least, when I hit my head on the cement track in a fall from my machine while going at a 50-mile-an-hour pace.

"I think Caesar Simar is the best rider in Europe. He gave me the hardest race in the 100 kilometer championship. Albert Champion is riding fairly well. Cycling is as popular as ever across the water. Sometimes there are crowds of 25,000 at the Park des Princes track in Paris."

Walthour's wife and one of his three youngsters accompanied him on the trip.

"RUBE" WADDELL AT BUFFALO TO PLAY THE GRIDIRON GAME

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—"Rube" Waddell, pitcher of the Philadelphia Americans, accompanied by his wife, arrived in Buffalo last night. He is here to fill an engagement with the Oakdales and expects to play at fullback. "Yes, I've signed with Philadelphia for next season," said the "Rube" as he left to look for Manager Stallings.

BARNEY OLDFIELD FAILS TO REDUCE ANY RECORDS

DENVER, Nov. 6.—Barney Oldfield made several trials for records at Overland park today. He failed to reduce the mile record, and after two attempts at the 10-mile record, which were not completed because of breakdowns of his machine, he abandoned further effort.

GEIDER CHOSEN HOCKEY MANAGER AT WILKINSBURG

Captain of New Interscholastic Team Will Be Elected This Week.

R. E. Geider has been elected manager of the Wilkinsburg High school hockey team. Geider was the unanimous choice at a meeting of students. A captain will probably be elected this week.

Wilkinsburg will be one of the two new members of the Interscholastic league, playing at Duquesne garden. Another school will be admitted this week. It is very likely Allegheny Prep. school will make the fifth club.

Manager McMurray of the Wilkinsburg High school football team denies that he cancelled on the W. and J. academy eleven for last Saturday. "We had a game arranged with W. and J. academy for Saturday, but I received a telegram asking that it be played either Friday afternoon or Saturday morning instead. We could not play at either time suggested by W. and J. and so told them. Then the game was called off," says Manager McMurray.

"Spook" Lytle of the East Liberty academy eleven is laid up with a bad knee. Lytle hurt it in a baseball game last spring, which kept him off the diamond the greater part of the season. Then he injured it again recently playing football.

Andover beat Louisville last year 23 to 0. Jim Humbird of Pittsburgh, who captained Andover, made all the points. Saturday Lawrenceville was outweighed five pounds to a man and was inferior in the science of the game. Andover, on the other hand, had a fast team and got the jump on Lawrenceville every time. Thompson, the Andover captain and guard, was easily the star on his team. Lawrenceville came near scoring only once, when McKaig broke away for a 50-yard run. He had a clear field, but Bullock caught him from behind.

State scored on Annapolis on a touchdown on Morehead's 40-yard run and a goal from the field by Morscrip.

Yale's second touchdown against Brown was the result of a disagreement among the officials. Cobb punted out from his five-yard line and Rockwell caught it on the 35-yard line, but dropped the ball as he was tackled. All three officials had a different idea of the play, some claiming interference and others a fumble by Rockwell. As a result of the disagreement the ball was sent back and punted out a second time. This time Hoyt caught at Brown's 27-yard line and heeled for a fair catch. Hoyt kicked the goal.

Starr, the little freshman quarterback, ran the Crimson team brilliantly. With this boy as general, Harvard's plays went off with a vim and dash not seen on Soldiers' field in years. Each play was different from its predecessor, and by his intelligent use of Harvard's versatile attack, Starr kept his men fresh and fighting desperately in every play. He, himself, contributed no small share of push and energy to the offense, for he stuck to his man like a burr, dragging him forward always toward the Dartmouth goal.

Penn's second touchdown Saturday was the most spectacular of the day. Stevenson had twice essayed an end run and twice had been thrown for a loss. Reynolds dropped back to punt, but the ball was slipped to Greene, who dashed through the Lafayette linesmen, dodging the backs, and, with only little Morrison between him and the goal, the lanky halfback sped down the field. Morrison jumped for him on the 10-yard line, but a straight arm thrust prevented a tackle and Greene went on over for a touchdown, having carried the ball 50 yards.

For the first time this season West Point Saturday had its quickness matched and played against a team which combined agility with weight, and presented a tandem offense in Ritter, Cooney and S. Rulon-Miller, that was irresistible. Stannard, the big Tiger freshman tackle, who has developed from a crude piece of football material into a polished player, seemed to delight in carrying the ball, and for a total of 67 yards he forced his 220 pounds through the opposing forwards. Once he grabbed the leather near the 40-yard line, burst through Erwin and with six opponents clinging to his togs he struggled and fought his way along for 30 yards before a bold Cadet fell in front of the advancing crowd and checked its progress.

Crowell of Swarthmore was easily the star of the game against F. and M. His work of kicking goals from the field has not been equaled since the days of Dewitt of Princeton. Crowell kicked two goals from placements, one from the 54-yard line, and another from the 45-yard line. His work in running back punts and field generalship was also of the highest order.

ALLEGHENY PREPS WILL PLAY E. L. A.

The Allegheny Preparatory school eleven, which has beaten every school in its class on the Allegheny side of the river, will tackle preps from the other side this week. The Preps will play the East Liberty academy eleven either Friday or Saturday at Exposition park.

If W. U. P. has no game for Saturday then the Preps will have the park, but if it is occupied by the collegians then the school game will be decided Friday.

The Allegheny Preps are feeling good over their victory over Trinity Hall Saturday at Washington and are confident of beating East Liberty. East Liberty has the advantage in weight, averaging a fraction over 144 pounds to the Preps' 127.

The weights of the two teams follow:

Allegheny Preps.	Weights.

BALTIMORE ROWERS ACTIVE.

Philadelphia and Worcester Also Anxious for the N. N. A. Races.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Although the time for holding the next championship races of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen is ten months away, there is already keen competition among the rival clubs for the privilege of having next year's races.

The oarsmen of Philadelphia, Baltimore and Worcester, Mass., are anxious to get the regatta for their respective cities, and some preliminary canvassing has already been done, presumably with the object of influencing the executive committee of the national association, who will decide the matter next March.

There is a strong belief that Baltimore will be the successful bidder, as this city has not had a regatta in many years.

Massillon Reserves Victorious.

MASSILLON, O., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—In a game of football today the Reserves of Massillon beat the Imperials of Akron 11 to 0. The score was made in the last half. The teams were evenly matched and the game was warmly contested. The Reserves have not been scored on this season.

LATEST ABOUT BOXERS.

Terry McGovern wants to fight Jimmy Britt at 120 pounds ringside. It is thought Britt prefers to wait and fight Young Corbett, in case the Denver boy beats Battling Nelson. Under those circumstances, Britt and Corbett would draw a big house in San Francisco.

Frankie Neil's next fight will probably be at Los Angeles. The Century club of that city has offered him a date early in January with either Johnny Reagan or Hughey McGovern as his opponent, and the former champion is inclined to accept. Neil refused three offers to fight in Philadelphia before going to San Francisco.

Jem Mace, the veteran pugilist, who, at 74 years of age, recently stated in London that he was prepared to make a limited round contest with another middle-weight in England for the championship belt, now in his possession, and for which Sayers and Heenan once fought, Mace has recently returned frm South Africa where he has been giving boxing lessons.

Battling Nelson and his manager, Teddy Murphy, have agreed to Young Corbett's proposition to split the purse in their coming fight on the basis of 75 per cent to the winner and 25 to the loser. When Nelson expressed confidence in his ability to win, Young Corbett said: "What's the matter with taking a chance, so that whoever wins will get something?" Nelson was willing. It has been decided to set the fight for November 29.

Mike "Twin" Sullivan is after Joe Gans for the lightweight title, and is willing to put up a forfeit of $1,000 to show he means business. Sullivan wants the weight 133 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the contest, which terms ought to suit Gans. Sullivan claims his victory in six rounds over Willie Fitzgerald, who went 20 with Gans, entitles him to a show with the lightweight champion.

OFFICIALS PICKED FOR BIG CONTEST

Harmon Will Referee and Thurston Umpire W. U. P.-West Virginia Football Game.

LYCEUM PLAYERS STATISTICS

Officials of the W. U. P.-West Virginia game tomorrow afternoon were chosen yesterday. The representatives of the respective colleges decided on Prof. Harmon of California normal as referee; Thurston of Lehigh, umpire, and Dr. William Farrar of U. of P., timekeeper.

The W. U. P. team is in fine shape for the West Virginians and is out for record scores itself. Capt. Thompson's men want to come as near the Michigan score of 130 as possible, made against the collegians from Morgantown.

All arrangements have been made for the game tomorrow on the Bluff between Pittsburgh Lyceum and the W. and J. college team. The Lyceum management has made arrangements for the handling of a large crowd. The weights, height and age of the Lyceum players follow:

Name—Position—	Weight.	Height. ft.	in.	Age.
McMahon, left end	150	5	8	24
Gillespie, right end	152	5	8½	23
Campbell, right end	143	5	5½	22
Seaman, left tackle	161	5	6	23
McKeever, right tackle	165	5	6	22

New Baseball League.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—M. Menke, who was head of Matton club of the Illinois-Indiana league when it was first organized, has taken steps toward forming a six-club league for next year, to be composed of the following cities: Danville, Matton, Paris, Pana, Taylorville and Champaign. All had strong independent leagues last year.

BETHANY CLAIMS A CHAMPIONSHIP

West Virginia, It Alleges, Fluked Out of Game, Thus Forfeiting Title.

CLARK SHRONTZ IS COACH

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

WHEELING, W. VA., Nov. 6.—Bethany college of Bethany, W. Va., during the second season in which she has had good coaching, has put a football team on the gridiron which is now claiming the championship of West Virginia. She is claiming this through the failure of West Virginia university of Morgantown to play the game on November 5 which had been scheduled, from playing which Bethany now maintains that Morgantown backed out.

The game with Morgantown was scheduled early in the season. The proceeds of the game, which was to have been played in Wheeling, were to be divided between the two teams. West Virginia recently wrote the Bethany manager that she was afraid of losing money on the trip and did not feel like playing under the conditions. So anxious was the Bethany manager to play that he immediately wrote the Morgantown manager that his team would guarantee the the expenses of the Morgantown team for the Wheeling trip. No reply was received to this nor to three telegrams which were subsequently sent.

In spite of the disappointment which was caused by the failure of Morgantown to come up for this game, the Bethany team has not abated at all the hard practice which it has been doing throughout the season under Coach Clark Shrontz, former star end of W. and J. in '99, 1900 and '01; right end on the Pittsburgh All Stars in '02; and last year at Franklin, Pa., which claimed the championship of the United States.

Bethany is now plugging the hardest she knows how for the game with W. and J., which is to be played in Wheeling November 19. Shrontz, former W. and J. man, has hitched his wagon to the star of defeat for W. and J. If he can do that it will indeed be a triumph for his coaching.

Bethany this year has Shannon of Charleroi, Pa., tackle on last year's W. & J. team, as captain. Dave Morrow, former captain of the Ohio university team, is playing a tackle for Bethany this year. He will play against the team he captained once on Thanksgiving, when the Ohio university team comes to Wheeling to play Bethany.

W. & J. INDIGNANT.

Claims State Has No Right to Charge Dirty Playing in Recent Game.

WASHINGTON, PA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—The Washington and Jefferson football authorities are indignant over the charge of dirty playing made against the team by Capt. Forkum and other State football players. A leading member of the athletic committee said today:

"The charges of rough tactics can just as easily be made by W. and J. against State. As a result of the game with the Centre county collegians every W. and J. varsity man, with two exceptions, was placed on the hospital list, and as a consequence we were compelled to play substitutes against Geneva and cancel the game for yesterday. These injuries were nearly all inflicted in the State game, and a majority of them came illegally. State's threat to cut W. and J. off her list causes little apprehension here. The Pennsylvania State management this year solicited the game and overtures for a game next year have already been made."

LEE MAY ORGANIZE DUBOIS TEAM

Pittsburgh Players in Minor Baseball Leagues Hit Fairly Well During Past Season.

OTHER DIAMOND GOSSIP

Eddie Lee, the veteran independent manager, will attempt to revive baseball next summer in Dubois. Lee, several years ago, started a boom in the sport in that town, and after a relapse he thinks it is about ripe for another good team.

Lee wants Jack Lang, the well-known player, to be his partner in the venture. Lang thinks well of the proposition and it is likely they will soon open negotiations for a park.

Lee is now in Altoona, where he revived the game three years ago, being succeeded as manager by Charlie Carpenter. Lang is coaching the South Fork Young Men's Christian association football eleven.

St. Clair Likes Latrobe.

Paul St. Clair of Indiana, a student in the Medico-Chi college of Philadelphia, was in Pittsburgh yesterday. St. Clair is a former catcher at Indiana Normal. Last spring he caught on the Interscholastic nine when it made its two weeks' trip over the independent circuit. St. Clair, after seeing the Latrobe eleven defeat the Braddock team Saturday, thinks the Westmoreland county eleven is the strongest in the state outside of the big colleges. He predicts that Latrobe will win from Steelton and thinks that Brallier, the Latrobe quarterback, is as good a player as any big college man playing the position.

Offer to DeMoss.

Charlie DeMoss, the Allegheny shortstop, who played third for Waynesburg last summer, has been reserved by the Wheeling Central league club for next season. A person interested in minor league affairs the other day offered to place DeMoss in the Iowa State league as manager of a club, promising to secure his release from Wheeling.

Clarinton Signing.

The baseball enthusiasts at Clarinton are already beginning to sign players for next summer. Clarinton wants to have the best independent team in this section and has good backing.

Pittsburghers Hit Well.

Pittsburgh boys in the minor leagues the past season hit fairly well. Harry McChesney, who was with Des Moines in the Western league, and who was picked up by Chicago Nationals, and "Red" Calhoun, who was with Haverhill in the New England league, were about the best according to the averages. Calhoun hit over the .300 mark. The Western league averages, just announced, show that McChesney led the Pittsburghers in that league. Josh Clarke, once in this part, Lobert, "Silver" Braun, once a local pitcher, who was with Denver, and Pitcher Harvey Cushman, are in the list. John Burns of Johnstown, who caught for Clarksdale in the Delta league, hit for .200. In the Three I league Alperman and Haggerty hit well. The averages of these players follow:

	G.	A.B.	R.	H.	Pct.
McChesney	141	585	103	169	.289
J. Clarke	143	563	107	156	.277
Lobert	143	565	92	149	.264
Braun	108	284	44	80	.208
Cushman	24	80	5	14	.175
Burns	51	186	21	37	.200
Alperman	121	470	55	129	.274
Haggerty	84	137	19	37	.270

COCKRAN ASSAILS THE PRESIDENT

New York Congressman Wants a Law Regulating Campaign Contributions.

WOULD PUBLISH THE ITEMS

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
Herald Building, Herald Square.
NEW YORK, Nov. 6.

In an address in which he assailed the answer of President Roosevelt as the most shameful confession in the history of nations, W. Bourke Cockran, at Miner's Bowery theater tonight declared that he will introduce a resolution at the next session of congress to investigate the whole subject of contributions to all national parties.

"The short session will not be 48 hours old," he declared, "before I shall introduce a resolution calling for the appointment of a non-partisan commission, with the chief justice of the United States at its head, if possible, to examine into the whole use of money in the national campaigns of both the great parties and all parties, to open the books, to investigate the source of such contributions and to ascertain why they were thus made.

"I declare to you a law on that subject will soon become a part of the statute law of this country. It will be passed and approved, for the acknowledgement of the president has caused such a profound sentiment of horror and apprehension over the whole subject that no party and no president will dare to oppose it.

"It would not require a very much involved law, nor yet one of great length. Even now I can see it. The contribution of any man or corporation to the campaign of any party shall be published in the public press; that they may see what manner of campaign is conducted; that the source of its strength may be discovered.' Then, do you not know that a campaign manager will be bound to refuse a contribution of extra size, or from a doubtful source? Who could object to that? I believe a contribution to a campaign fund disinterestedly made should be published as a roll of honor, as it proclaims the interest of a citizen in civic problems."

HELD SUNDAY MEETINGS.

Political Parties Conducted Rallies in Connecticut Amid Much Enthusiasm.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Nov. 6.—Although the actual campaigning of the leading political parties came to a close with rallies throughout the state last night, there was considerable political activity in several of the larger cities today, many meetings in the form of rallies being held.

It was quite unusual to continue the campaign over Sunday, but the enthusiasm was so great the meetings were called and in almost every case were well attended. Several Democratic candidates on the state ticket spoke at meetings in this city, the largest being held in Lyceum hall, this meeting being attended almost entirely by Hebrew voters. Neither party has planned meetings for tomorrow.

MAKE CLAIM FOR DOUGLASS.

Massachusetts Democrats Declare They Will Elect Governor, Though Conceding State to Mr. Roosevelt.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—But little activity was manifested today at the headquarters of the Republican and Democratic state committees, the leaders of the campaign apparently husbanding their energies for tomorrow, the last day of the campaign. The Democrats, while conceding President Roosevelt will carry the state, claim William L. Douglass, Democratic candidate for governor, will be elected, and that they will secure five of the 14 congressmen.

The Republicans say Mr. Roosevelt will receive a plurality of from 60,000 to 75,000; that Gov. Bates will be elected, although running somewhat behind the national ticket, and that they will elect 12 out of the 14 congressmen.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT.

Party in West Virginia Claims It Will Capture at Least Two Congressmen.

WHEELING, W. VA., Nov. 6.—National Committeeman John T. McGraw and State Chairman O. S. McKinney of the Democratic organization are here tonight. They claim they will elect S. W. Walker in the Second and Allen C. Murdock in the Fourth congressional districts, with good fighting chances for Davenport in the Third and Altizer in the Fifth.

Dovener (Republican) is expected to win over Barnes (Democrat) in the Wheeling district, the normal Republican majority being between 4,000 and 5,000.

The Democrats are making a great effort to capture the legislature, and the Republican tax reform disaffection is aiding them materially. In the event of their success National Committeeman John T. McGraw will succeed Senator Nathan B. Scott.

TELFORD WILL WIN.

Regular Republican Nominee Sure of Election in Indiana's Judicial Contest.

INDIANA, PA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—The three-cornered judicial contest which has been waged bitterly in this county is now about closed, with all indications pointing to the election of S. J. Telford, the regular Republican nominee.

Telford and Judge Harry White, the present judge of this county, are related by marriage. The enmity between the two candidates is of long standing. Both men were candidates for the nomination 10 years ago, when Judge White was elected over Judge Blais by a few votes. The same two are now running.

BETTING TWO TO ONE ON LA FOLLETTE'S ELECTION

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 6.—The clerical work of the state campaign was practically closed tonight at all the headquarters of the state central committees. The situation in the state remains unchanged from last night, the LaFollette Republicans and the Democrats both claiming that they will carry the state. The betting throughout the city on the result in the state is in favor of LaFollette, some wagers being made at odds of 2 to 1, on the governor.

NEW HAMPSHIRE DEMOCRATS HOPE TO ELECT GOVERNOR

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 6.—The Democrats have put forth strong efforts to bring about the election of Henry F. Hollis for governor. A circular was issued today to 5,500 Republican voters urging them to support Hollis. The Republicans, however, are confident of the success of both national and state tickets. The license question will be voted on Tuesday in every city and town in the state.

Claims Majority of 6,000.

WASHINGTON, PA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—With the massmeetings of Republicans at Canonsburg last night the campaign in Washington county was closed. County Chairman J. V. Clark predicts a Republican majority of $6,000.

OFFERS 50 TO 1 ON ROOSEVELT'S ELECTION

A New York Man Would Also Wager 5 to 1 on Higgins Carrying State.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 6.—Odds of 50 to 1 were offered in this city today by M. H. Lichten, at the Hotel Rudolf, that Mr. Roosevelt would be elected president Tuesday, and he also offered to wager 5 to 1 that Lieut. Gov. Higgins will be elected, and that the Republicans will carry New York state. Lichten is from New York and is one of the wealthiest real estate men of New York. In speaking of his willingness to wager a large amount on Mr. Roosevelt at 50 to 1 he said:

"I am so confident that Mr. Roosevelt will be elected president of the United States next Tuesday that I am willing to wager $50,000 against $1,000. I will also place a bet of $5,000 to $1,000 that the Republicans will carry the state of New York and elect Higgins governor. I couldn't get anyone to take these bets when in New York Saturday."

Mr. Lichten has posted his check with Charles R. Myers, proprietor of the Hotel Rudolf.

MANY YOUNG MEN WILL GO HOME TO CAST VOTE

State Party Committees of Adjacent Commonwealths Have Sent Thousands of Railroad Tickets.

Several thousand residents of the city, mainly young men who have come to Pittsburgh and found employment within the past year or two, will leave the city today to go to their homes and cast their ballots.

Pittsburgh probably has more such residents than any other city in the country, excepting only Washington. The fight between the parties in some of the nearby states, notably New York, West Virginia, Maryland and Indiana, is so hard this year that every county committee throughout those states has been asked to furnish the names of citizens who are living elsewhere. To those voters the state committees have sent railroad tickets, accompanied by an earnest appeal to make the trip home and help elect the candidates.

Both parties are doing this in this campaign and the system for accomplishing it is an elaborate one with a number of clerks at the various state headquarters engaged in that work alone.

The industries of Pittsburgh giving the city its widespread reputation for ability to furnish remunerative employment, attract here a constantly increasing stream of young men from all over the eastern section of the United States while many come from a still wider radius. For the first few years of their residence comparatively few of these become citizens of this state and county, but as they become established in their business and Pittsburgh grows to be their home, they take a greater interest in local matters and the majority of them acquire the rights of citizenship here.

FIGHT FOR CONGRESSMEN.

Kentucky Republicans Are Making an Active Campaign in Two Districts.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Nov. 6.—The Sunday before election finds an energetic still hunt for votes proceeding in Kentucky, especially in the Third and Fifth congressional districts. The Fifth district, composed of the city of Louisville and Jefferson county, is at present represented by Swafar Sherley, a Democrat, but the Republicans are claiming that they will carry the district, with a fighting chance of swinging over the Third also.

The Republicans declare that if they do not carry the state for the national ticket they will at least cut down the plurality given Bryan at the last election. The Democrats are very confident, some of the leaders estimating Parker's plurality as high as 20,000.

WOMEN READY TO VOTE.

The Anti-Church Domination Fight Has Brought Out a Large Registration in Utah.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 6.—The campaign in Utah will not close until tomorrow night. In Salt Lake City and county, especially, every effort is being made to arouse interest. The Republicans will close their campaign with a big rally while a number of meetings for women voters will be held by the American party. A feature of this year's campaign has been the enormous registration of women. This increase is especially marked in Salt Lake City and the American party managers claim it is due to the anti-church domination fight.

Weather conditions being favorable it is believed the vote in this state will be the heaviest ever polled.

OUTLOOK IN CAMBRIA.

Democrats Will Elect Only Three Candidates—Big Majority for Mr. Roosevelt.

JOHNSTOWN, Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Indications are that the voting in Cambria county Tuesday will be extremely heavy. The Democrats have little hope of electing more than three on their ticket—J. E. Thropp for congress, over John M. Reynolds; H. T. McNellis of Johnstown, for district attorney, over J. W. Leech, and W. H. Strauss for register and recorder.

It is conceded that J. M. Sinemen of South Fork (Republican) will be elected to the state senate over Thomas H. Greevey of Altoona. President Roosevelt will carry the county by at least 3,500 majority.

BOTH PARTIES CLAIM VICTORY IN MONTANA

BUTTE, MONT., Nov. 6.—Republican managers tonight predict that Montana will go for Mr. Roosevelt by 7,000 plurality, returning Joseph M. Dixon to congress and electing a Republican legislature. Democratic leaders declare there is not the slightest doubt that Judge Parker will carry the state by a good majority, also that the complexion of the next legislature will be Democratic. The election of Gov. J. K. Toole (Dem.) is practically conceded by all parties.

FIGHTING TO THE LAST TO GET MARYLAND'S VOTE

Campaign Managers of Both Political Parties Express Confidence in the Result.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6.—The managers on both sides say important work is yet to be done in adding the finishing touches to the campaign. Republican State Chairman John E. Hanna spent the day at his home in Harford county, and Democratic State Chairman Murray Vandiver rested at his home in Havre de Grace, but both of them will be back in Baltimore early tomorrow morning.

There are practically no new developments in the Maryland campaign, both are expressing confidence in the result, and each claiming to have derived advantage from the controversy between President Roosevelt and Judge Parker, a subject which has largely engrossed public attention here for two days.

The Democrats are insistent that they will elect four of the six congressmen from this state and the Republicans are equally positive that they will elect four in spite of what they allege to be trick ballots, gotten up by the Democrats in certain counties.

CLAIMS WATSON WILL POLL 1,500,000 VOTES

New York's Populist Chairman Says Empire State Will Give at Least 40,000.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Melvin G. Palliser, chairman of the New York state executive committee of the Peoples party, tonight issued this statement:

"Mr. Watson will poll over 1,560,000 votes. The Peoples' party is thoroughly organized, and is more national in character than the Republican party. It has aggressive organizations in every state of the union, except Vermont, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania. In all except these states its ticket is on the official ballot.

"Mr. Watson advises us the electoral vote of Georgia will be cast for him. A Peoples party congressman will in all probability be elected in Alabama. In New York state I feel confident that Watson and Boulton will poll from 40,000 to 50,000 votes."

PRESIDENT'S "SQUARE DEAL" BROUGHT INSTANT APPLAUSE

Reference to Mr. Roosevelt's Statement Caused Cheering in a Tammany Meeting.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO THE GAZETTE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Reference to the president's statement that he wanted every man to have a "square deal" elicited instant applause at the meeting in the Star theater this afternoon, under the auspices of the Tammany hall general committee of the Thirty-second assembly district. When speakers referred to the reported adherence of all the corporate wealth of the country to the Republican party in this campaign, there were cries of "How about Belmont?"

The only times that the speakers, who included Senator Thomas F. Grady, former Senator Charles A. Towne and Martin W. Littleton, and the audience seemed to be thoroughly in accord, was when Gov. Odell was being lashed. Then the applause was spontaneous and prolonged.

MINNESOTA POLITICS MIXED.

Mr. Roosevelt Will Carry the State, While the Democrats May Get the Governorship.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Nov. 6.—The day passed without developments in the political canvass of sufficient importance to affect the result. Roosevelt will carry the state, the only question being the size of his majority. Republican managers claim it will be at least 70,000. The Republicans are practically certain of a solid congressional delegation.

The only uncertain element in the state campaign is the governorship. Newspaper partisans of John A. Johnson print tabulated polls of the state giving him pluralities ranging from 6,000 to 26,000. On the other hand, the Republicans claim the election of Robert C. Dunn by 41,000 plurality. That there is serious defection among the Republicans is admitted, but whether it is of sufficient extent to overcome the enormous plurality the presidential ticket will receive is a mooted question.

POPULISTS ARE HOPEFUL.

Expect That the Fusion Ticket Will Carry Nebraska if the Farmers Get to the Polls.

LINCOLN, NEB, Nov. 6.—Fusion state headquarters in this city estimate the total vote in Nebraska Tuesday at 225,000. If the farmer vote can be got out Chairman Weber of the Populist committee says the fusion state ticket will be elected and they will control the legislature.

Tomorrow night fusion rallies will be held in many small towns and school districts. W. J. Bryan will speak for the fusionists at Omaha. Republicans of Lincoln have planned for their greatest meeting of the campaign Monday night. Former Senator John M. Thurston will speak.

GILL TO CLOSE FIGHT.

The Venango Prohibition Candidate for Congress Has Made a Hot Campaign.

FRANKLIN, PA., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—The Prohibitionists of Venango county, who elected a sheriff last year, and who are admitted to be an important factor politically, will close their campaign with a big rally in the court house here tomorrow night. John E. Gill, candidate for congress in this district, will be among the speakers.

Gill has made an active canvass. His supporters claim his vote in Venango county will exceed that of Joseph Sibley. Sibley's election, however, is assured, as he is strong in the other counties of the district.

Claim 40,000 for Roosevelt.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, VT., Nov. 6.—Notwithstanding the fact that there has been less political activity than in any presidential campaign for 20 years, the Republicans claim that President Roosevelt will have 40,000 plurality in this state.

INDIANA IS SAFE FOR THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

Mr. Roosevelt Will Carry the State and the Legislature Is Secure.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 6.—Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, Republican candidate for vice president, remained at home all day with his family. To many friends who called upon him during the day he said the day of rest was especially welcome. Notwithstanding the strain of his recent speaking tour, he is in the best of health.

There is no perceptible change in the political situation in Indiana since Saturday night. The leaders of both parties appear confident that their work has been brought to a successful conclusion.

The vice presidential candidacy of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, the coincident candidacy for re-election of Senator Albert J. Beveridge, and the possibility of the election of the Republican national ticket has injected into the political situation in this state a peculiar and unusual contingency. The possible necessity for the election of two United States senators has been the incentive for the Democratic state committee to concentrate its efforts upon the legislative ticket. Many prominent Democrats believe their party will make serious inroads upon Republican strength in the legislative districts. On the other hand, Republican party leaders are confident that the Republicans will have increased representation in the legislature.

Today it appears that Indiana is Republican by a safe majority. It is the consensus of opinion that John W. Kern, the Democratic candidate for governor, will run considerably ahead of the national ticket.

Indications are that the congressional elections will result in no change in the complexion of Indiana's representation. The Democrats will probably elect four congressmen and the Republicans nine.

THOUSANDS HASTENING TO THEIR HOMES TO VOTE

Government Employes Crowded Western Trains to Register Their Choice at the Ballot Box.

Through trains for the west were crowded last night with government employes from Washington, who are hurrying to their homes in the west to cast their ballots tomorrow. Some of them are going as far west as Colorado and will have little time to spare between stepping out of the cars and reaching polling places. Many were civil service employes making the journey, and there was no particular exodus of the faithful of any political party.

"It's a long and tiresome journey," said a Nebraskan, as he exercised on the platform of the Union station, "and I will have a jolting ride on a stage coach to my father's ranch before I can vote, but I wouldn't miss this chance to soak Bryan. Nothing short of a landslide for Roosevelt will shut off his noise. Bryanism is for all the world like a cyclone and is liable to start its little whirlwinds every time there is the slightest change in the political barometer. I am from the west and I know. Hill and Parker will not be heard from after Tuesday, but Bryan is only waiting to break loose again in a new quarter. He only needs to reach into a pigeonhole for a new political issue."

The corridors of Pittsburgh hotels last night seemed deserted. Traveling men from New York are hurrying home to vote and guests from other quarters seemed equally anxious to visit the polling places.

NOT MUCH CONFIDENCE.

Democrats Have More Faith in Defeating Stokes Than Carrying New Jersey for Parker.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 6.—The interest in the state campaign in New Jersey has been so great that the Democratic and Republican gubernatorial nominees will not close their canvasses until tomorrow night. Both Edward C. Stokes, the Republican nominee, and Charles C. Black, the Democratic standard bearer, accompanied by other speakers, will make short tours and deliver addresses. The day brought forth no change in the predictions of the party leaders as to Tuesday's results.

The Republicans reiterate that Roosevelt and Fairbanks will carry the state by a large majority, and that Stokes will win by a slightly reduced vote. The Democrats, on the other hand, have more confidence in defeating Stokes than they have in carrying the state for Parker and Davis. The next legislature, which will elect a successor to United States Senator John Kean, will, the Republicans say, be safely Republican.

DEMOCRATS CONCEDE KANSAS

State Committee Admits That Mr. Roosevelt's Plurality Will Be About 70,000.

TOPEKA, KAN., Nov. 6.—It is conceded by the Democratic state committee tonight that Roosevelt's plurality in Kansas will be about 70,000, but it is claimed by the committee that the Democratic state ticket will be elected because of a complicated ballot system in this state, which probably will result in many defective ballots if much scratching is done. It is believed that thousands of Republicans will vote against T. J. Kelly, Republican candidate for re-election to the office of state treasurer, against whom serious charges have been preferred in the conduct of his office.

The Republicans claim that Roosevelt will carry the state by 90,000 plurality and that the entire state ticket will be elected by safe pluralities, admitting, however, that Kelly will run about 50,000 behind his ticket.

HAS NO CHANCE AT WASHINGTON

Northern Democrat is Useless in Congress Except to Aid Southerners.

NO IMPORTANT ASSIGNMENTS

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU.
HARRISBURG, PA., Nov. 6.

"A northern Democrat is practically useless in congress, except to add one to the voting strength of the southern Democrats, who gobble all the important committee assignments and control absolutely the policy of their party in matters of legislation."

Congressman Olmsted of the Dauphin district made this statement today in discussing the attempt of the Democratic state campaign managers to increase their representation from Pennsylvania in the coming session of congress. Mr. Olmsted said that northern Democrats were considered of little importance by John Sharp Williams of Mississippi in making the Democratic committee assignments at the opening of the present session of congress.

"Observe, for instance, how the three Democrats from Pennsylvania were treated," continued Mr. Olmsted. "Mr. Dickerman from the Northumberland district was given but a single place, and that at the extreme tail end of the committee on patents, in which not one of his constituents has any interest and from which committee not a single bill was considered at the last session. He was practically deprived of all opportunity to be useful to his constituents.

Got to Ventilate the Hall.

"Mr. Shull of the Northampton district was given one assignment at the tail end of a committee in which his constituents had no interest and which, I think, never held a meeting during the last session of congress.

"Mr. Kline of the Berks and Lehigh district, representing over a quarter of a million people and the largest Democratic constituency in Pennsylvania, had two appointments—one at the little end of the committee on manufactures and the other at the extreme tail end of the committee on ventilation and acoustics, where it became his duty to see that the hall was properly ventilated and that its acoustic properties were such as to afford a hearing for the southern orators who did all the talking.

"These three Democrats, representing Pennsylvania, did not all together hold as important committee places as were given by the Republican speaker to Mr. Patterson of the Schuylkill district, who held four places. This single Republican member from a mining district was given more opportunities for usefulness than the Democratic leader assigned to all three of the Democrats from Pennsylvania.

No Chance for Veterans.

"The present able, zealous and indefatigable representative of Pennsylvania upon the important committee on invalid pensions is Elias Deemer of the Williamsport district, who serves all old soldiers well and faithfully. What chance would he have to be useful with that committee in the control of the southern Democrats?

"Every man in Pennsylvania who wants to take congress out of the control of that splendid speaker, 'Uncle Joe' Cannon, and these able, experienced and trustworthy committee chairmen and turn it over to Mr. Williams of Mississippi, and those who he has already designated as his choice for chairmen should vote for the Democratic congressmen.

"But every Pennsylvanian who wants to make permanent our present prosperity, insure a continuance of the present wise and patriotic control of congress and prevent it from falling into the hands of experimentalists, theorists, dreamers and place hunters, and above all, those who are opposed to the entire upheaval of our present protective tariff and gold standard currency regulations, should vote for the Republican candidates.

"Nine-tenths of the Democrats in the next congress will be from the south. If the north, east and west send enough additional Democrats to give that party a majority it will simply be furnishing the tail to enable the Mississippi kite to soar."

DON'T BELIEVE ALL YOU HEAR

Rev. Dr. Levy Applies His Lecture Subject to Judge Parker's Utterances.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER NOT MET

"Don't Believe All You Hear," was the subject of the third lecture in the present course of Sunday lectures delivered by the Rev. Dr. J. Leonard Levy before the congregation Rodeph Shalom in the Eighth Street temple yesterday morning. Referring to the common public weakness in taking snap judgment on utterances based on unsubstantiated evidence, the speaker referred to the political controversy of the hour as follows:

Little did I imagine when I announced the subject of this address last week that so apt an illustration of its validity would have been afforded by the unwarrantable attack upon the character and motives of the president of the United States. In a campaign singularly free from personalities, the closing hours have been marred by the utterances of one who, it seems to me, should not have believed all he heard. The American people have a right to expect that a man of the dignified and honorable position in society held by Judge Parker, should be provided with more than circumstantial or hearsay evidence before making and repeating public utterances attributing the basest motives to Mr. Roosevelt and charging him with prostitution of his official position for purposes of blackmail.

The manly and characteristic letter of the president which appeared yesterday morning, called for proof and not hearsay evidence, and though opportunity has been afforded, the proof has not been forthcoming. Mr. Roosevelt does not need my defense, neither does he require my help. His open life, his fearless sense of justice, his upright and manly character, his distinguished public services, his unquestionable devotion to America, his incomparable public record through days of stress and difficulty—these are his defense and, under God, these are the sure sources of his help.

But I am filled with regret that ere these has not successfully protected him from slur and innuendo and misrepresentation and built on no more solid foundation than a casuistry worthy of the schoolmen and on an irresponsible whisper, the thunderclap of vituperation should have broken over his honorable, respected and innocent head. Verily, I say unto you, believe not all you hear!

The people have a propensity for jumping at conclusions. They do not ask for evidence, nor do they permit the accused the opportunity of self-defense. They constitute themselves the jury, the witnesses and the attorneys, and without affording the accused the slightest opportunity, they condemn unheard. In law it is held to be ethical to consider the prisoner innocent until his guilt is established. In ethics it is considered proper to base one's life on the Talmudic proverb, "Judge not thy neighbor until thou hast been in his place."

We know very well that the greatest proportion of our information in whatsoever direction is taken on trust or credit. Very few of us ever trouble to verify information received. We place ourselves in the position of being members of a packed jury of suborned witnesses or bribed judges. Confiding fools that we are, we are only too willing to believe all we hear when it is to the discredit of others. It is curious how the mind searches others as with candles when the story of goodness or generosity is brought to its attention, how sceptical and doubtful it becomes when it is told of another's virtue or beneficence.

This double standard can only be explained by the fact that man has not yet emerged from the brute stage wherein a compliment to another means an insult to one. We are only too willing to flatter our own poor merits by detracting from the worth of others, and yet experience has shown us again and again that we should not believe all we hear. It is impossible for some people to tell a story straight as it is impossible for them to repeat a truth. To possess the power of accurately repeating what one has heard is given but to few. Try to repeat a song after having heard it once. Try to describe all the objects seen at a single glance in the window of a store and you will discover how faulty is the memory and how weak the power of vision to aid it, and yet, how often we condemn on hearsay although we know beforehand that it is but the fewest who can repeat a conversation straight or reproduce terms in the exact tone of voice, connection and intent originally designed.

VOTERS' OBLIGATIONS.

Rev. W. S. Lockard Preaches on Moral Responsibilities in the Use of the Ballot.

"The Voters' Moral Obligations" was the subject of the sermon delivered in the Ames Methodist Episcopal church last evening by the pastor, the Rev. W. S. Lockard. Taking for his text, Acts, i:24, "And they prayed and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two Thou hast chosen," and said in part:

Many good men believe that this election to the apostolate was a mistake. The business of the waiting disciples was to pray for and respect the Holy Spirit and not to select a successor to Judas. Some of my brethren today do not vote because of the godless condition of politics. Is not the better plan to go into every election with prayer to God and an earnest determination that truth and righteousness shall prevail in so far as our vote can help.

The most potent weapon in our hands is the ballot. Just as sure as the silently falling snow can stop the mighty locomotive, so surely can the ballots of freemen cause any political party to stop, reverse its policy and obey the will of the people.

There is an analogy between the election of the context and the one on the eve of which we find ourselves. We find:

First—There was a vacancy to fill—always an excellent reason for an election, but one which some think with great vigor will not enter into the election of next Tuesday.

Second—There had been a betrayal; Judas had sold his Lord. This charge is as old as the world, yet every campaign revives it.

Third—Christ's kingdom must be forwarded. This should be the paramount issue of every campaign. Your vote has to do with the conquest of the world. Jesus Christ is an imperialist. His is a conquest for freedom. I have nothing to do with your political party, but your vote has to do with all moral issues and you are responsible to your Lord for the way you use it.

Fourth—They prayed. We are called upon by presidential proclamation to give thanks and pray for divine help and guidance. I call you to your knees on account of this presidential election that no calamity may overtake us, but that the Lord which knowest the hearts of men whether of these two he has chosen, one with God is a majority.

MAN'S BETRAYAL BY VOTE.

Pastor L. H. Ruge Speaks on Proper Application of Suffrage.

"Judas Iscariot, or the Man Who Betrays His Lord by His Vote," was the subject of the sermon delivered by the Rev. L. H. Ruge in the First Congregational church, Allegheny, yesterday morning. Taking for his text "Betrayest Thou the Son of Man?" the pastor said in part:

Treachery has ever been the master sin of the race. It is a sin harder to forgive than any other. Nations punish it with the death penalty. All men hate the traitor.

Here we have a character with a fixed purpose to do evil. He heard his crime announced by his Master and yet said: "Is it I?" He dared to look his naked treachery in the face before Christ and his brother disciples. It must have taken a deep, dark determination to do that deed unshaken by the clearest evidence of his guilt.

Go out to the polls on Tuesday, you who are disciples of Him who stands before the world today as incarnate truth and righteousness—go out and cast your ballot, in your hand ask your Lord, face to face, Am I betraying my brothers and humanity into the hands of the enemy?

TWO FINAL SERVICES HELD.

Pittsburgh and Allegheny Congregations Worship for Last Time in Old Buildings.

Closing services were held last evening in two local churches. In the Fifth Avenue Methodist Episcopal church the Rev. J. J. McMillan, who was pastor of the church in 1862, presided over the final service in the old church building. A new church is to be dedicated at Forbes and Murray streets.

In the Twelfth United Presbyterian church, Western avenue and Manhattan street, the pastor, the Rev. C. McCreary, preached the final sermon last night on "Looking Backward." The congregation will dedicate their new church next Sunday.

Men's Club Reorganized.

The Men's club of the First Christian church, Braddock, of which the Rev. O. H. Phillips is pastor, has reorganized for the coming year. The new officers are Louis A. Drexler, president, and Walter A. Holland, secretary and treasurer. The president will appoint topic and entertainment committees.

WORK TOGETHER TOWARD ONE END

Rev. D. H. Geissinger Preaches on the Relation of the Church and the State.

PAYING CAESAR'S TRIBUTE

The Rev. D. H. Geissinger, pastor of the First English Lutheran church, Grant street, yesterday preached on "Church and State." His text was Matthew, xxii:21: "Render, therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Mr. Geissinger said in part:

Among other important lessons we learn from this text to make a proper distinction between temporal and spiritual obligations; between secular and religious authorities; between what we call the church and the state. In this marvelous declaration Jesus establishes the rights, regulates the duties, indicates the separate jurisdiction of the church and the state. We are taught here what is the fundamental principle of the true relation of the church and the state.

The state has its place in the world; its rights, its powers, its authority. The church likewise has her place, her rights, her authoritative powers. Both church and state are divine institutions. The state is ordained, specifically, for the material and temporal welfare of man. The church for his spiritual and eternal welfare. But these two welfares are most intimately related. Man's spiritual as well as his material life is, for the time being, here in this world, and must be cared for while he lives in this world. On the other hand, man's material, temporal life depends for its highest possibilities and happiness very largely upon his spiritual life. The supreme promise of Christianity is the highest blessedness, not only for the life that is to come, but also, and in some sense especially for the life that now is. For this reason the church and the state are fundamentally dependent upon each other. They belong together, even as the soul and body are parts of the same being. Neither the church nor the state could fulfill its purpose in the world without the other. The two have a common origin in the all-including providence of God. They have a common end in the final kingdom of glory, where God Himself shall be all and in all.

But these two divinely ordained institutions, while they are so intimately related, have their separate and peculiar spheres of activity, their distinctive methods of operation and their essential elements of independence. They must not, therefore, be outwardly or mechanically united. Their prerogatives should not be permitted to encroach upon each other. The state should not interfere with the rights and privileges of the church, nor the church with those of the state. Each should recognize and safeguard the rights of the other. Every true child of the church will be a loyal servant of the state, and every loyal citizen of the state should be a true child of the church—cannot be a loyal citizen in the highest sense unless he is a child of the church, as no one can love his fellow man truly without loving God supremely. In other words, you cannot give Caesar's just tribute in the fullest sense without giving to God the things that belong to Him.

The church and the state are for each other. The state has really no higher function than to safeguard the right and promote the mission of the church. On the other hand, the supreme work of the church in the world is to mold and enlighten the hearts and minds of rulers and ruled with the righteousness of God and with the love of God and man, that eternal principles and verities of heaven may be realized on earth. When that comes to pass God's kingdom will have come, and His will shall receive the same obedience on earth that it does in heaven.

UNPARALLELED FAITH.

The Rev. Dr. W. F. Silveus Speaks from Old Testament on Unflinching Devotion to God.

"Unparalleled Faith" was the topic of the sermon delivered by the Rev. Dr. W. F. Silveus in the Second Cumberland Presbyterian church last night. He spoke from Genesis, xxii:9-10, and said in part:

Without faith it is impossible to please God. It is the first step to consecration. The man who has not simple, unwavering confidence in the reality, rectitude and wisdom of God, would never think of doing God's will in His way for himself alone. It is impossible.

The unbelieving and unregenerate always determine their actions by the congeniality of them. True, it is possible for them to do God's will, but never simply to please Him. Thus, you find a worldly church explains away or ignores all doctrines and rites which are vexatious, contrary to human nature, or likely to thwart personal interests. He is the greatest among saints who does God's will most earnestly when it is opposed to his own will; who abhors sophistries, and obeys unquestionably; who neglects his own interest when required. It was because these principles were so fully acted on by Abraham that he is introduced to us as one of the foremost in the kingdom of heaven.

The simplicity of his faith, the thoroughness of his obedience, are almost incredible to us in these days, when the austere side of Christian life is so largely neglected. He was commanded to do an act of the most unnatural, the most revolting, the most cruel, an act which was calculated to embitter all his days, alienate him from his wife, and brand him among all generations as a murderer of his only son; placing him in the estimation of posterity among the brutal fanatics who gave their first-born for the sin of their souls.

He rose, this stern, uninterested man, the cleaving of the wood, loaded the ass, awoke Isaac, journeyed three days with that noble lad by his side. The sweet face of the boy lay there in the tent, calm and unconscious. The father sees him, knows how great his loss will be, knows his own hand is to shed his boy's blood; knows that beloved form will be burnt to ashes. What were his reflections? How did he argue? Was it "The command is unnatural, I will turn back. God will never enter into judgment with a father for refusing to kill his son?" Was it "Surely I was deceived. A devil in myself or voice has tempted me?" No. This was the thought: "God requires thee, Isaac. He stands before thee, my son. He is good, and if it be necessary (in the interest of love and justice), though I kill thee, He can raise thee up." "Accounting that God was able to raise him from the dead." A beautiful thought. How surely hope supported her sister, faith. He had no promise for this hope of resurrection.

Beloved as Jesus was by the Father, He freely gave Him up for us; and Jesus freely came. "I gave my life for thee." What hast thou given for me?" Brethren, do you wonder at the sacrifices God requires of us? Can we refuse Him our time, our service, our all?

MINORITY REPRESENTATION.

Pastor Young Suggests a Novel Idea in Election of Candidates.

Pastor S. Edward Young, in his sermon in the Bijou theater yesterday morning, made a novel political suggestion. He said:

I hope to see the passage of a law granting more to the minority. Each election ought to present to the public candidates-at-large of different parties, so that any man in Pennsylvania who favors Prohibition, for instance, or Socialism, could vote for the candidate-at-large of that party for this state, and thus each weaker party could have at least one representative at Harrisburg and one at Washington. Our hope is not in suppressing, but in encouraging the minority and in giving a hearing to every man with an idea.

CHOKED BY TUNNEL FUMES.

Through Train of B. & O. Held Up for 50 Minutes at Sand Patch While Passengers Suffer.

Held up for 50 minutes in the long Sand Patch tunnel of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad and nearly suffocated by the fumes from the engine was the fate of the passengers on Train No. 5 over that railroad Saturday morning.

Train 5 is the through New York-Chicago express, due to arrive in Pittsburgh at 7:45 p. m. An accident stopped the train suddenly in the middle of the tunnel. Before the trouble could be remedied and the train started 50 minutes had elapsed. The doors and windows of the cars were kept tightly closed, but despite that the cars became filled with the choking fumes and it was necessary for the passengers to wet handkerchiefs and breathe through them in order to be able to breathe at all.

The tunnel is one of the worst on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio, and the plans for the improvement of the crossing over the Alleghenies provide for its abandonment for the through passenger trains.

U. S. Cruisers at Gibraltar.

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 6.—The cruisers Olympia, Cleveland and Des Moines of the United States European squadron, Rear Admiral Jewell commanding, have arrived here.

Parade in the Eleventh Ward.

The Eleventh ward and Adolph Ellis marching clubs and the Eleventh Ward Tariff club will parade tonight. The procession will form at 7:30 p. m. at Center avenue and Dinwiddie street.

TRUE RICHES A GREAT BLESSING; GOD ADDETH NO SORROW THEREWITH

Pastor Russell Discusses Race for Wealth, and Some Drawbacks of Success.

HEARD BY A LARGE AUDIENCE

Pastor C. T. Russell was with his home congregation in Bible House chapel, Allegheny, yesterday and spoke to a packed audience from the text, "The blessing of the Lord; it maketh rich, and He addeth no sorrow therewith."—Proverbs, x:22. He said:

The rush and push and scramble for riches was never before so great as at the present time, and the reasons for this are quite apparent. The increase of knowledge which has reached the masses during the last half-century has awakened generally thoughts and aspirations which never before moved any except the extremely few. Added to these has come the examples of Vanderbilts, Astors, Carnegies and Schwabs, rising from the humbler positions in life to pinnacles of fame, affluence, luxury, in an incredibly short time. The fact that a ferryman, with a little boat which he propelled by hand, became a multi-millionaire and the head of one of the largest railway systems in the world, could not be without its influence on all who heard of his success. The fact that a peddler of coon and bear skins became a multi-millionaire, and that his representatives in the world today are the largest owners of real estate in the largest city of the United States, could not fail to impress a people upon this side of the Atlantic with the thought that a telegraph messenger boy rose from that position to be the controller of hundreds of millions, and a broad dispenser of public benefactions in his laudable endeavor not to die extremely rich, necessarily made an impression upon the minds of the people of the world. The fact that a country boy driving a stage coach should in a few years leap into world-wide prominence as a millionaire caused breathless astonishment. Naturally enough all these exhibitions of prosperity, or, as some would say, luck, have tended to fill the ambitions of the rich to be richer, but also of the poor to become rich. And so we see the millions of civilized lands eagerly straining every nerve and watching every opportunity peradventure some such good fortune should come to them, meantime encouraged by many examples less notable than those we have cited.

Is it any wonder that the world is seemingly gone mad in its pursuit of wealth?—that mammon is worshiped or served in every conceivable manner and place in the hope of receiving name, place, honor and ease? And is it any wonder that those worshiping at the shrine of mammon, as they look about them and see the more favored ones on the social tiers above them, should come to feel that the attainment of wealth would mean the attainment of every blessing, comfort and joy that heart could wish? It is no wonder! It would be reasonable if it were otherwise! It would be strange if human reasoning were not to reach just such a conclusion!

Acquisitiveness a God-Given Quality.

From the standpoint of some, all this would be set down as greed and selfishness. But this is not the proper viewpoint. We are to remember that acquisitiveness is an organ to be found in every creature, and that as surely as we hold to the scriptural declaration that man was created in the moral image and likeness of God, so surely must we contend that acquisitiveness as originally possessed was an element of this mental likeness to the Deity. The desire to acquire is not an evil of itself, but a blessing, without the influence of which mankind would be anabitionless, drones, savages.

What then is the difficulty if acquisitiveness is of itself a good quality, a proper organ of our nature? Why are some of the fruits of its exercise evil—some of them diabolical? We reply that this organ, and the majority of people today is too active; but, on the other hand, the quality of activity as compared with its opposite, lethargy, indolence, is an admirable quality. Our highest conception of the perfect man, Adam, sees him full of activity, energy—not slothful nor sickly, weak, nor of a spirit. So then we can neither blame the organ of acquisitiveness nor the quality of activity, for both are good qualities under proper regulations and restraints. We must look further for the seat of trouble.

Poor Combinations Responsible.

The secret of our inquiry lies in the fact that as human beings we are not controlled by one or two of the organs of our constitution, but are influenced by all of them more or less. For instance, acquisitiveness as a quality of the human mind is surrounded by other qualities and influenced by them. To illustrate: Alimentativeness, or the love of eating and drinking, tests upon acquisitiveness and supports it, saying, I must acquire money, otherwise I cannot have the food I crave. The organs of music and mirthfulness have their bearing also, and urge: We cannot be gratified unless we have money for entertainment, etc. Ideality, or the love of the beautiful, calls loudly to acquisitiveness, saying: Whatever you have, dress or home, house or lawn, must be in good taste, and this requires money. Conjugal love—love for a mate and appreciation of the family circle—calls to acquisitiveness, saying: Qualify yourself, for without money and its produce we will be deprived of our enjoyments. Acquisitiveness, pressed thus from every side, more under present conditions than in the primitive state, casts about for assistance, and finds the organs of combativeness and destructiveness ready to assist it in meeting the calls mentioned.

Combativeness and destructiveness are the artillery and cavalry of the human character, diverting every resource of human energy into their service, and waging life's battle against everybody and everything out of harmony with their master, acquisitiveness, and its various co-related qualities associated with acquisitiveness. This is particularly the mental attitude of the whole world of mankind, and the strife is growing day by day. The scriptures inform us that ultimately the greatest time of trouble which the world has ever known will prevail, and that this, through the evil it brought about by just such selfish strife, in which, as the Lord through the prophet declares, "every man's hand shall be against his neighbor." The worldly expression on the subject, which is becoming more and more the world's rule of life, is expressed in the adage, "Every man for himself and the devil gets the hindmost." The hindmost who fall in life's battle sometimes breathe their last in almshouses or in hospitals or as suicides. The clear intimations of scripture teach us to expect more radical things in the future than have been known in the past, except in the great period of anarchy which swallowed up the Jewish nation in A. D. 69, and in the great French revolution at the close of the eighteenth century.

The Side-Wheel Steamer.

Phrenologically considered, the part of the cranium representing acquisitiveness lies just above the ear, and, as we have just seen, all the other qualities of mind seem more or less to pay tribute to acquisitiveness—to depend upon it for their sustenance and pleasure—and all more or less serve it and obey its mandates through a kind of necessity. Thus seen the human head is very much like the side-wheel steamer, the wheel which propels it being represented by the organ of acquisitiveness. Every person who has made his mark in the world financially or socially we may surely know possessed this organ of acquisitiveness in large measure—proportionately larger than the organs surrounding it. In some persons this is a good arrangement. If, for instance, the organ of ideality were the largest and dominating one and acquisitiveness were small, the result would be a lover of the beautiful without the energy and ambition to produce or acquire the beautiful. We see then that the difficulty with our race as a whole is not that we have the organ of acquisitiveness, nor that it is too large, but that our other qualities are deficient, too small, out of proportion, out of balance.

Benevolence, Veneration, Conscience.

Lying farthest from acquisitiveness are the higher reflective organs, benevolence, veneration and spirituality, conscientiousness, firmness. These latter are located in the forefront and along the top of the head. As might be surmised from their location, they are more independent of acquisitiveness than are the other organs; nevertheless they often pay tribute also. For instance, benevolence exercising itself along the line of charities, may appeal to acquisitiveness, saying, I cannot dispense wealth which I do not possess; I therefore need your assistance.

Veneration may also to some extent bow to acquisitiveness, saying, my reverence for God leads me to desire to place some trophy at his feet, and this means that I must have money. Spirituality may also turn to acquisitiveness for assistance, and conscientiousness may support the claims of both of these and call loudly to acquisitiveness, claiming it to be its duty to acquire in order to give in harmony with benevolence, veneration and spirituality. Wherever we see the qualities represented by these higher organs strongly manifested in character we speak of the person as being noble-minded—a desiring wealth and using it on a higher plane than those who are comparatively deficient along these lines.

All that we have here described belongs to the natural man. Even the noblest characters under such an organization of mind are not what the scriptures class as spiritual. This brings us to another feature of the subject, one of the most important factors of human affairs—the office of the will.

Those who have followed the argument understandingly will have no difficulty in appreciating my meaning when I liken these various organs or qualities of the mind to the various members of a legislative body, such as congress or parliament. In every such gathering of men there are some who dominate and to a large degree control the others, who, while having functions of their own, practically become satellites of their leader. There are generally two leaders or parties, sometimes more, seeking control of such a legislative body, and the strongest party dominates the others and places its leader in control as the speaker of the house, and passes the rules and by-laws governing the conduct of affairs under its regime. Thus, for instance, the late Thomas B. Reed not only belonged to the dominating party in congress, but by that party was made its leader, and in co-operation they made the celebrated "rules for the house" respecting the order of business and the rights and liberties of the members.

Applying all this to the human mind, we note that in some minds on some questions there would be full agreement of all the organs; as, for instance, they generally agree to follow the lead of and to support acquisitiveness, and acquisitiveness in turn recognizes the claims of the various members, watching after their interests. Where, however, conscientiousness or veneration or benevolence, for instance, are reasonably large and influential in the mind, there is apt to be more or less of conflict. Conscientiousness may refuse its consent to the methods which acquisitiveness and combativeness might be disposed to employ.

Or it might be such a question as would enlist in the support of conscientiousness the organs of veneration, spirituality, the more religious elements of the mind. These would oppose, and cause quite a mental dispute arising over certain questions, with long debatings and powerful arguments on both sides. Indeed, fortunately, this is the attitude of the large proportion of people in civilized lands. Otherwise—if conscientiousness, etc., offered no opposition, and acquisitiveness, urged on by the various pleas of the surrounding faculties, had no opposition or restraint, the results in the world would be terrible indeed; murder and robbery would be everywhere prevalent. We are glad, therefore, that the "fall," which has so unsettled the mental balance of the race, has not in the majority crushed out or eliminated conscientiousness and its supporting organs of the higher realms of thought.

This attitude of mind, this continual conflict, makes the life of the average man more or less miserable, for he not only desires many things which he cannot obtain, but he is in continual conflict with his conscience and higher organism in respect to the methods employed in securing what he does obtain. The result in the majority is an agreement to disagree, an agreement to do neither the one thing nor the other, to neither satisfy conscience and the higher organs, nor to give full rein to acquisitiveness and the lower organs. This condition we might well term an armed truce between two opposing factions, neither one conceding fully the rights of the other. The apostle, speaking of such a mind, declares it to be a double mind, and says, "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways"—he lacks full satisfaction, he lacks mental rest and peace; consequently the majority of the world of mankind, whether rich or poor, are dissatisfied, discontented, unhappy.

The Peace of the New Mind.

If we are convinced of the truth of what we have just considered, we come properly to the questions: Is there a remedy? and what is it? We answer that there is a remedy, but comparatively few realize this even partially, and many of them hold back and never obtain the blessing. The first step in any reformation, social or individual, mental or physical, is to grasp the situation and realize the need of a change. Hence our endeavor to portray this need by a review of the conditions as they exist in the natural mind. Those who are satisfied with such a warring condition, those who do not seek peace and rest, we do not address, for the effort would be useless. To those who are seeking we quote the words of the great Redeemer: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." The whole world is laboring and is heavy laden. To such, who have sought rest in other directions and have found none, we have a message—the divine word speaks peace by the blood of Christ.

Our mental unbalance, no less than our physical blemishes and mental and moral weaknesses, all corroborate the scriptural narrative of the fall—the fall out of divine favor—with all that this signifies of disease and physical blemish culminating in the tomb—the fall into sin and its penalty, death. Recovery is impossible except by divine aid, and this aid has been extended to us as a race in the great sacrifice finished at Calvary. Knowledge of that fact and an appreciation of our own needs are the strand of the cable of hope which draw us toward the Almighty, the Creator, for forgiveness, that we may obtain mercy and in His appointed way find grace to help in every time of need.

The gracious message of God to us is that if we are ready to forsake sin to the best of our ability, and will exercise faith in Christ as our Redeemer, the Lord will begin a work of reformation in our hearts and lives. He will do this through the instructions of His word, which extends "exceeding great and precious promises" to those who come unto Him in "the only name given under heaven and among men whereby we must be saved." This reformation enjoined upon us we naturally strive to accomplish for ourselves, saying if our past sins are forgiven we will see to it that we sin no more for the future. Good resolution! Noble endeavor!

However, before we have gone very far in the new way, in the way of righteousness, in the way of obedience to the Lord, we find ourselves woefully entangled, and at first are wholly unable to understand the matter. We find our will to be to do the Lord's will, which we recognize as absolutely right and proper; but we find in our members, we find in the different organs of our minds various combinations arrayed against our good intentions. Acquisitiveness insists that whatever be our change of intention, nothing must be done to the curtailment of its influence in our lives. Others of our members join in the same protest, and insist that the new resolutions are certainly extreme if they bring upon us any disadvantages of an earthly kind. With united voice almost every organ of our minds cries out that we must not be extremists, for this would make us fit the eyes of the world fools and rob us of all the pleasures of life.

It requires a little time for the reformed will to right itself from the shock received from such assault as this from every quarter; it is a new experience and rather a surprise. The expectation perhaps was that as soon as reform became the watchword of life, the Lord would overrule matters so that everything would run smoothly, and joy and peace of heart would prevail. But, however, the Lord desires a still deeper work of grace than this, and hence the natural battle of the selfish organs preponderates against the will of God, if permitted. Of these the apostle says: "The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."—Rom. viii:7.

It cannot be in harmony because of its deranagement through the fall, and all the organs of the mind still maintained their original proportionable weight and influence, matters would be different, and the reformed attitude of mind would be approved as the course of wisdom by the concensus of judgment of all the members or faculties of the mind. It is this loss of mental balance or equilibrium through the fall, and the many centuries of hereditary degeneration that constitutes the "worldly mind," or, what the scriptures designate the "carnal" or "fleshly" mind—that is, overbalance toward the interests of the flesh, unbalance as respects the higher interests.

"Change" Start to Finish.

What steps shall be taken to get rid of this conflict between the reformed will and the natural mind? What is the road to the peace our Lord referred to, saying: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest?" The step which the Lord directs as necessary to the attainment of full peace with Him is a very radical one, but one which once taken is never to be regretted. It is the step of full consecration—the full submission of the mind or will to the will of the Lord. It means what in congress would be called the radical division of the house. The members are lined up, sworn to fidelity to the new will—faithfulness to the Lord.

This is still more radically presented to us in the scriptures, namely, that every sentiment, emotion and principle of our hearts and minds are delivered over to obedience to the Lord, with a full enthronement of Him as an autocrat controlling our every interest and affair. It pledges to the Lord that every talent and quality of mind and body shall be to the extent of our ability brought into subjection to His will, and that any other disposition shall be "mortified," that is, deadened. The apostle expresses this thought to the consecrated ones, saying, "Mortify therefore your members which are on the earth." That is to say, your earthly members or those organs of your mind which are abnormally interested in the earthly affairs, and not willing to be subject to the heavenly will or to be disowned and ignored and destroyed. From them is to be taken all power to vote or to exercise any influence whatever in the councils of our minds; because they are recognized as being rebellious against the Creator, against the Redeemer, and against all the laws of righteousness and truth which these represent.

The full renouncement of the old man, the old nature, the old mind, is the culminating step in the conversion which properly begins with acceptance of Christ as our Redeemer, and resolutions of reformation and righteousness of life. So full consecration or giving up of the will to the Lord the apostle denominates a "sacrifice." He explains to us that the will represents the whole person, and that the sacrifice of the will, or the determination to follow not our own will, but follow completely the Lord's way, is accounted of the Lord as a sacrifice event unto death—the death of the will, to last even to the death of the body. He tells us that this is pleasing in the Lord's sight, that we are no longer to offer burnt offerings and peace offerings, but, says he, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God (in the forgiveness of your sins) that ye present your bodies living sacrifices, holy, acceptable to God, your reasonable service."—Rom. xii:1.

This is all that any one can do. We have nothing worthy of the Lord's acceptance. The merit of Christ, ours by faith, has made us worthy and approved. The Lord's acceptance signifies the adoption of such into the family of sons of God, that we might be "heirs of God, joint heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord, if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together." (Rom. viii:17.) The next step of progress is the giving to such of the Holy Spirit—not a miraculous matter, not attested and followed by "gifts" and "signs," as at the beginning, for these are no longer necessary, but a development in the accepted ones of the mind of Christ. His disposition, His character likeness—a development in such of the fruits and graces of the spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, brotherly kindness, love. This begetting of the spirit to newness of nature as sons of God we are told is the first fruits of our inheritance—the earnest or hand-payment of the blessings which the Lord proposes to give to such. The remainder of this blessing is to come to us in the first resurrection, when, if faithful, we shall be raised from the dead, "changed," made like our Redeemer, spirit beings, sharers of His glory, His honor, His immortality.—Rom. ii:7; Cor. xv:51.

The Philosophy of the Change.

What is the philosophy of this change or renewing of the mind? How is it that with the same brain, and the same arrangement of organs, and the same disproportion of balance amongst them, and the same preponderance of the lower or fleshly elements of the mind—how is it, with all these, that the new mind is possible which loves those things that once it hated, and despises those things that once it loved?

We answer that the secret of the matter lies in the will. The will, the general sentiment of the mind, having once committed itself intelligently, reasonably, on the side of the Lord and of righteousness, and having renounced the rule of selfishness, acquisitiveness, combativeness, etc., and having deprived those organs of the power to vote (because they were found to be rebellious and not subject to the law of God), the way is comparatively easy because only the higher organs are permitted to vote in the councils of the mind. Even they are not permitted to vote their own sentiments, but are merely permitted to say what thoughts and words and conduct from their standpoint would be consistent with a full devotion and loyalty to the Lord and His principles of righteousness. Now peace reigns in that mind because the obstreperous inclinations are cast out of privilege—not permitted a voice in the guidance of the affairs of life. The divine will alone is the rule of life, and the divine promises feed, strengthen and support that mind.

For instance, spirituality finds its satisfaction in thinking of the heavenly things; conscientiousness approves, and declares it to be but our reasonable service to do the divine will; veneration reverences the Lord and takes pleasure in His worship; such as it could not derive from the worship of Mammon; benevolence also rejoices in endeavoring to copy after the pattern of divine love, of which itself has been the recipient. Gradually all the organs more and more come into accord with this new ruler, the will, the mind of the Lord, the will of the Lord. Ideality takes pleasure in thinking of the heavenly ideals and the glorious things promised in the future, and, while still appreciating earthly things, appreciates the heavenly things as beyond all compare. Family love leads the home loss their merely selfish features and take on a new meaning as related to the family of God and the heavenly home.

Acquisitiveness, too, being restrained as respects earthly things, except as these are necessary and helpful in the spiritual way, takes pleasure in aspiring to acquire the heavenly things which God has promised to them that love Him. Even combativeness and destructiveness, once servants of avarice, being killed off as respects the earthly things in the same proportion become alive to all the heavenly aspirations and love to fight warfare to fight sin in every form, and with the new creature to war a good warfare against the world, the flesh and the adversary.

From this standpoint all the organs of the mind can come into full harmony as they could not all come into harmony from the opposite standpoint. When selfishness was in control, and sought to bring every talent into subordination to itself, there was continually the warfare with conscience and the higher powers; but now, since conscience and the higher powers have acknowledged the headship of the Lord, have enthroned Him as the ruler of the heart, the lower elements of the nature—at first barely restrained from sin—are gradually enlisted in the active service of righteousness, the peace and joy and rest and spiritual comfort of that person proportionately increases.

Heavenly Riches vs. Earthly Riches.

Here we find the full application of our text. We see a heart into which has come the blessing of the Lord—not the full blessing, indeed, for that will not be attained until the perfection of the first resurrection, but a great blessing. Do we need to point out in what manner this blessing of the Lord maketh rich the hearts of His consecrated people? This is not necessary, yet it may be expedient to stir up our pure minds by way of remembrance. What greater riches could anyone have in this life than the love and joy and peace of the Holy Spirit, which is the portion of those who have fully and heartily taken the steps we have indicated.

No wonder the apostle said, "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."—1. Tim. vi:17. Such we have passed through the experiences we have delineated can understand the apostle's words—rich toward God. Rich in their appreciation of his favor toward them; rich in the appreciation that He is now their Father, because they have heard His voice and have accepted the privilege of adoption into His family; rich in that they have already received the first fruits of His Spirit; rich in that they have already the peace of God which passeth all understanding; rich in that to them pertain the exceeding great and precious promises of the divine word, both for this life and for the future, rich in the sense that the apostle referred to when he said, "All things are yours, for ye are Christ's and Christ is God's."

"He addeth no sorrow with it." There is a hidden suggestion in these words of our text, a suggestion that all other riches than those which come from the Lord have hidden in them a sting of sorrow, of disappointment. And is this not true? Is it not a fact that those who set their hearts on earthly riches, as so many at the present time are doing, are apt, as the apostle says, to be pierced through with many sorrows, whether they gain the riches or fail to gain them. He who thinks that riches can purchase peace and joy and relief from aches of heart and head has not correctly studied the object lessons all about us in the world. "The poor rich," as someone has termed the wealthy, deserve much of our sympathy, for, as the scriptures declare, proportionately fewer of these are found amongst the saints—"not many great, not many wise, not many learned, not many rich, hath God chosen, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, to be heirs of the kingdom." God has not chosen the rich generally because they are rich, because more set their ambitions, and feeling less their needs, have to a lesser degree responded to the glorious opportunities of faith and obedience, to the extent of a full consecration of heart and head, mind and body, to the Lord, His will, His service.

His is on the other hand, the blessing of the Lord which makes rich the heart of His consecrated ones, as we have just observed, adds no sorrow—it is unalloyed. This does not imply that the Lord's consecrated ones have no trials or difficulties in life, that all things go smoothly or them, for the reverse is the contrary of this. As our Master's words indicate, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, in Me ye shall have peace." It is this peace of God, this rest in His care, this satisfaction with His plan, this realization of our riches in Christ Jesus, that is our satisfying portion, and that protects us to a new degree from the sorrows, pains, troubles and difficulties of others. To us, in view of our spiritual relationships and blessings and promises and hopes, all these are "light afflictions but for a moment, working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

MILLIONS FOR A NEW STOMACH

One of the greatest American millionaires once said to his physician, "A million dollars, Doctor, for a new stomach," and then the sick man groaned and turned away. One of a man's greatest pleasures is that born of a keen appetite, vigorous digestion and a good dinner, and this belongs to many a good fellow who is living on small wages, but the rich man without a stomach has to forego the good things of the table because his stomach rebels. Without a healthy stomach and a good digestion, our blood is thin, watery and poor, our heart action is weak, our liver does not do its duty, and man is miserable and unhappy. In this condition man is prey to the germs of influenza, consumption, malaria and all the ills that he is heir to. Consumption can be treated by natural methods which are as close to nature as possible.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., years ago understood this disease, and after a long period of experiment discovered certain roots and herbs which were nature's remedies, and succeeded in putting them up in a form that would be easily procured and ready to use. This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It gives no false stimulation because it contains no alcohol and no narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. Instead of a cod liver oil, against which the already sensitive stomach will declare open rebellion, this tonic has a pacifying action upon the sensitive stomach and gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. It maintains the patient's nutrition by enabling him to eat, retain, digest and assimilate nutritious food. It overcomes gastric irritability and symptoms of indigestion, and in this way fever, night-sweats, headaches, etc., are done away with. It fortifies the body against the germs of consumption, grip and mala

ACTIVITY SHIFTED FROM RAILROADS TO INDUSTRIALS

Wall Street Speculative Week Began and Ended With Reaction, Though Not Particularly Severe or of Long Duration.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Wall street speculation week began and ended with reactions. These, while not particularly severe or of long duration, clearly indicated the pressure of some conflicting influences in the stock market. The interval between the opening and closing session was marked by much irregularity and by a shifting of pool and clique activity from the railroad list to the industrial division. This modification of the manipulative campaign, while not unreasonable, in view of the very high prices to which standard issues have been advanced, compared with the low grade specialties and industrials, lends confirmation to the theory of conflicting market influences, resulting in heavy sales of long stock, outwardly manifested by irregularity.

The price movement of the week was closely associated with some unexpected developments, such as Monday's incipient Anglo-Russian war scare and the heavy gold exports, and also with the close proximity of the election, which upon ordinary occasions, and in rational markets has ever been a period of normal hesitancy and uncertainty. The interjection of such factors in a speculative market renders predictions as to its future course, drawn from price declines, marked irregularity and an obvious shift in the speculative campaign, difficult and unconclusive. Possibly the unexpected developments and election uncertainty furnished sufficient reason for the market movements and the change in the speculative plan. The majority of traders have probably so concluded, but the future alone can determine the accuracy of the decision.

There is this to be said on the other side of the proposition, that precisely such market movements and the alteration of the speculative plan of campaign as was witnessed in the stock market last week might have resulted from causes entirely disassociated with the unlooked for news development or the proximity of the national election. Standard railway issues, for instance, have been advanced very rapidly and to a very high level, one which it is believed has fully discounted the harvests, business improvement and the election outcome. Few persons will dissent from the conclusion that the result could only have been attained either by the direct aid and participation of some very important financial interests, or by their indirect aid, such as their withholding securities from sale, or by such slow and cautious sales as not to impede seriously the plans and projects of the manipulators, or check the advance prematurely, until the proper psychological moment for selling had arrived.

It would be wholly logical if the great gambling operators and their allies, the financial interests, who have aided the movement thus far, decided to sell, to secure profits, that they would sell the high grade issues, which have gone up so far and so fast first. This would account for their diminished activity, their irregularity and their ultimate decline. For other and the outside cliques, great traders would be tempted to combat the movement but buying and selling contracts is one thing and buying and selling contracts when someone is feeding out long stock is another. Prices advance merrily in the first instance; they become active, they halt and finally decline in the other, as the pools, the cliques and the traders find themselves accumulating more shares than they can get rid of. Under such a condition to shift the entire speculative machinery into a new quarter, where stocks have not had great advances, and where there is less danger of anyone selling out, is quite a reasonable operation, and it looks as though something of the kind had occurred during the week.

What the future course of the market will be, no one knows. Money markets are not likely to develop anything disagreeable arising from known tendencies at home for some time to come. Underlying conditions are in many ways favorable for further speculative maneuvers of the same character as those evidenced in the past. Prices have advanced very far and have discounted every development in sight, but this is not saying that by sheer force of gambling they may not be advanced very much further. To say that they are not increasingly dangerous as they advance further, is to ignore all precedent and all experience. Still, the fact remains that the great western operators "who made the market" have been known to show very much greater activity than we have as yet seen, and very much higher prices than any we have known in past history. Whether they will end in deceiving themselves, as they did in September, 1902, remains to be seen. Accidents will happen in the best regulated of bull markets, and the temptation of persons to sell and take profits increases as prices advance.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(Special Cable.)—Harder rates for money and discount, together with reports of withdrawals from the Bank of England and a possible increase of the official rate from 3 to 4 per cent, combined toward the close of the week to keep the stock markets down to the level to which they had been depressed by the alarms of the early part of the week.

When operators returned to Capel court on Wednesday, after the usual November 1st holiday there was some fear that a new political crisis had developed. Prices fell and the markets were generally uncertain and weak. On Thursday, however, when it was seen that the Bank of England had not increased its rate of discount, all the markets improved. Political apprehension for the moment ceased to disturb the market, so that the reappearance of speculative and investment buying imparted renewed activity and strength especially to those securities which suffered most on the previous fall.

High class stocks had a good recovery under the lead of consols, which, however, eased off below the best, and the railway sections presented a good and healthy appearance.

The American market here has been a pale reflection of Wall street, there being a marked disposition to restrict further purchases by local operators pending the result of the presidential election.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK IN THE LOCAL MARKETS

Anomalous Situations Present Themselves, Notably in the Sugar Advance.

The past week in the local markets was one of the quietest dealers have experienced for many a day. There was no surprise in this, however, as the slump had been fully discounted, business men in all lines having looked for but little improvement until after the election. The receipts were light, which gave a chance to run off heavy stocks on hand, and the market is now nicely cleared up for the time when business is ready to resume.

The coming week is expected to be a big improvement over last week. Butter will probably advance another cent Monday, as the market is very strong and the supply short. The error in the Elgin butter telegram last Monday, indicating an advance of 2½ cents a pound, created some consternation among dealers who were caught short with the high figure this put the commodity to. The figures will undoubtedly be reached this week, however, so the error simply put the market up a week ahead of time.

Eggs are the scarcest thing in the local market. It is almost impossible to get enough fresh stock which is strictly select. Recandled and held fresh eggs are plentiful, but the price on select has advanced to 26 cents and will probably go higher within another week. The price of candled and storage eggs has also advanced, along with the higher class.

In the poultry market a slight decline was noted during the week. Poultry is exceedingly dull, although the price is lower than it usually is at this time of year and chickens are cheaper than fresh beef. The situation is rather anomalous, too, because the poultry supply is really short, the wet weather of the summer having been hard on the poultry raisers. A big advance is looked for, however, with the first real cold weather.

The grocery market was remarkably steady all week. The coffee situation eased off somewhat in the east, but there is still a shortage and the prospects for a raise are good in the near future. Local dealers are confident prices will take a sharp advance some time during the present month.

Sugar made a remarkable jump again the last week of 10 points. It is explained that this is due to the confectioners' trade, which is now in the market for its Christmas stock. It is also explained by the announcement that there is a scarcity of raw sugar. No matter what the cause, it is a surprise to dealers in general, as the sugar market was really low all summer and fall, during the canning and fruit season, and now, when it is all ended, the stock moves up many points in a week.

Flour reacted a little the first of the week and is now quoted at $5 55@6 00 a barrel. This price is considered a fair one, in view of the wheat market. Wheat has continued strong all week, only once breaking down a couple of points, and immediately reacting to $1 12 and over. There is not likely to be any change in flour this week unless a decided raise takes place in the wheat market. The grain will have to go up several points, however, to make any change in flour.

The cheese market is very firm and prices shaded up decidedly on this morning's quotations. There is no anomaly in the cheese situation, as the shutting off of pastures has been the main factor in the advance. The factories will soon begin shutting down for the winter season, and the stock on hand is likely to be decidedly short, as pasture was a failure during the fall and the supply of good milk has been exceedingly short. Higher priced cheese is one of the certainties of the winter season, and the price has been expected to advance long before this.

The stock of fruit and produce on hand at the end of the week is smaller than usual, and is as follows: Apples, 74 cars; bananas, 12; cabbage, 39; carrots, 1; cranberries, 6; grapes, 55; lemons, 8; onions, 15; oranges, 5; parsnips, 1; pears, 8; potatoes, 113; squash, 2; sweet potatoes, 31; turnips, 7; California fruits, 1; miscellaneous, 10.

HAY AND GRAIN.

RECEIPTS.

Receipts of hay and grain in the local yards Saturday were as follows: Pennsylvania line, 18 cars hay, 15 cars oats, 2 cars corn, 3 cars rye, 2 cars feed, 1 car straw; Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, 4 cars hay, 1 car corn; Baltimore & Ohio, 7 cars hay, 1 car corn.

Receipts for the week ending Saturday, November 5, were as follows: Hay, 334 cars; oats, 125 cars; corn, 30 cars; feed, 23 cars; straw, 18 cars; rye, 7 cars; corn and oats, 3 cars.

The hay and grain market showed firmness all week, despite heavy receipts of corn and oats. The hay was not all up to standard, the great majority of the shipments being mixed or low grade timothy which had to be pushed on the market. Oats shaded off a little, but there was no great change throughout the week. Corn is still in great demand and the price has moved up a little on old corn and down on new. New corn is cutting little figure in the market as yet. Straw is in heavy demand and good rye is very much called for and the price has stiffened. Rye holds up well in sympathy with wheat and the price is now as high as it has been for a number of years. The week was a fair one and dealers are looking for a big improvement by the end of this week.

IN THE OIL FIELDS.

Operators who watched for new developments in the lower southwest fields during the past week had a fruitless vigil. There was nothing discovered in any quarter to attract attention. Fewer wells were completed in all districts than has been the rule for some weeks. All of the indications favor a still greater decline in the lower southwest fields during the winter months. The demand for new producing territory is still very great and there is no visible quarter that looks capable of meeting the requirements in order that the drill may be kept active for any considerable time.

The complete development of the interior portion of the old fields is nearing the end and with no new pools in sight, the prospects are not encouraging. The deep sand districts have been the most active, but the best of that kind of territory has been worked over and the size of the late well is so small as to not make it profitable to continue operations in those sections under the present market.

In the opinion of many the deep sand territory cannot be developed at a profit under less than a $2 market, and under existing conditions an appreciation in values to that extent is not likely to occur in the near future. However, it would not be a surprise if the price of high-grade crude was to be advanced several points very soon. An appreciation in the market would no doubt stimulate operations in the shallow sand districts and be the inventive for starting more experimental work. It is not thought that all of the pools in the lower southwest and southeastern Ohio have been discovered.

The only new development that is now attracting any attention is the 50-foot district, located west of Mannington, Marion county, W. Va. It is not expected that it will prove of large dimensions, but the way the three wells now completed are holding up makes it look capable of furnishing other large producers. The Delmar Oil Company's test on the Hays farm is a fine producer. During the past week its production fluctuated somewhat, but at no time fell below 250 barrels a day, and was credited with 350 barrels the last day of the week. It was expected that the South Penn Oil Company would have gotten the sand at its third well on the Pitzer farm before the close of the week, but failed to reach that interesting point. All of the wells now drilling in this development will have an important bearing on extending the producing area of the pool. To the south and southeast gas has been encountered and there is no prospects for extending the producing limits in either direction. Gassers figured to a considerable extent in the development of all of the deep sand districts during the past year.

While there is increased activity in the fifth sand development near Fairview, Marion county, no new wells were completed during the week. The South Penn put its No. 10 on the D. Jones farm to pumping from the Big Injun sand and it produced 40 barrels the first 24 hours. This was originally a Big Injun sand field, but of late the fifth sand has been the objective point of the new wells started as well as drilling the old wells to the lower formation. Before the close of the week some of the tests to the northeast, where an extension is looked for, will be due in the sand.

On Kinchloe creek, along the dividing line of Lewis and Harrison counties, there is some new work starting and a part of it is important, touching an extension of the producing limits of the development. This district up to this time has not been productive of any large wells, about 20 barrels a day being the average.

The Folsom, Littleton, Smithfield and Pine Grove districts, in Wetzel and Harrison counties, failed to present anything better than light pumpers during the week. There is still a chance for some good wells in the Littleton district and it is the foremost in active operations. In the Richwood run district, some of the old wells are still very creditable producers and there is the possibility of finding others. The oil is developed in the Big Injun and the formation has not proven to be very regular.

The Berea grit district, on Yellow creek, in Calhoun county, is still the most active of any in the lower southwest and is completing more wells than any other. Those completed in the week show a smaller average in new production, but are of a size that makes it profitable to continue active operations. Very little new work is now starting in advance of the present defined limits. There is, however, a sufficient amount of undeveloped interior territory to keep the drill active for some months. In adjacent counties there is some experimental work under way, but it is widely scattered and is of the hit-or-miss kind without any regard for previous developments.

Ritchie county has suffered the greatest loss in new work. Since the Bonds creek country has been fully developed, operators have not succeeded in finding a new pool. Holders of territory along the south fork of Hughes river have not entirely abandoned the search for a new producing territory.

The Wick pool is still the most active in Tyler county. The commendable feature of this development is the staying qualities of some of the old wells, rather than the size of the new. The wells now coming in are small in comparison even with those that have been producing for months. In McElroy and Ellsworth district, along the eastern edge of the county, there is some experimental work starting.

Operations in the shallow sand districts on the Ohio side are declining. The only reason for this is the scarcity of producing territory. The development of the shallow sand districts in Washington and Morgan counties has been more profitable than in the deep territory in West Virginia.

The Big Injun development on Rays run, Washington county, has considerable new work starting and the wells coming in are fairly good producers.

On Wolf creek, in Morgan county, operations have declined, the best part of the territory having been developed. Dusters are now as frequent in that district as producers.

In Athens county, there is quite a determined effort making to develop a new pool and the prospects are encouraging. So far the wells have come in light and not a few dusters. It is shallow territory and the wells are put down with drilling machines, so that operating expenses can be kept very low.

The Woodsfield district, in Monroe county, made a poor showing during the week. To the north of the Keener sand district, several wells will be due to get the sand this week. Aside from this district there is no other in southeastern Ohio that can be regarded as of special interest.

BIG CROWDS SAW AUTUMN SHOW

Chrysanthemums, Fine Paintings and Good Music Shared the Honors at Schenley Park.

DOG VIEWED ART EXHIBIT

The real public opening of the autumn show in Schenley park occurred yesterday, when one of the biggest crowds in years filed all day long through the art galleries, the museum and the Phipps conservatories. The chrysanthemum exhibition was at its best, and Sunday offered the first opportunity for the majority of the people to take their first glimpse of the prize paintings and the new arrangement of the museum's wonderland.

The art lovers were out early in the morning and the galleries were crowded throughout the day. There were few sophisticated admirers there and not all the attention was bestowed upon the medal paintings. It is peculiar that the first Sunday crowd, as a rule, would vote in repudiation of the art jury's selection. Yesterday people saw good in everything on the walls and some of the most humble pictures, which were allotted the more obscure places, were surrounded by delighted visitors. Some landscapes that the critics overlooked and which remind the beholder of the fine greenswards of Constable, or the high colored effect of a hand-painted photograph, were probably the most popular.

The Sunday critics did not hesitate to say that they found difficulty in discerning the real art in Schofield's $1,500 prize winner, "Across the River." They liked "School's Out" and thought pretty well of "White and Gold," but scored all pictures of impressionistic tendencies.

Dog Viewed the Pictures.

One uninvited visitor caused some excitement in the galleries. A big, black Newfoundland dog slipped into the building and owing to the dense crowd evaded the watchful eyes of the guard at the door. At length he sprang up on a bench and sat steadfastly gazing at the walls.

"Tige must be looking for Bryan Wall," said a visitor, who was buying an edition de luxe of the annual catalogue.

All the people then seemed to spy Tige at the same moment. The dog's appearance did not attract friends and he was allowed to occupy his seat on the pedestal alone. Two of the attendants started to secure the intruder, but he sprang down and disappeared. A minute later he turned up in another room, but shrank away before he was caught and leaped down the whole length of the building, as if disgusted with the whole show. Finally he was captured and dragged out. He is probably distinguished as the only canine that ever visited the Carnegie art galleries.

Supt. George W. Burke yesterday placed the freak chrysanthemums on exhibition. These fill a nook in the west wing of the greenhouse and comprise the largest exhibit of floral monstrosities ever seen in Pittsburgh. There are a number of odd shapes of great size and delicate shading. There are several triple-headed varieties. Some seem to have pattered after other flowers and are shaped like luxuriant poppies.

Miniature Chrysanthemum.

In this collection is the "Golden Cluster," the smallest chrysanthemum in cultivation. The tiny flour is smaller than the blossom of a white clover and is a rich golden tint that eclipses the color tones of the mammoth varieties.

Director E. M. Elgelow yesterday went through the conservatory with the crowds and was particularly delighted with the arrangement of the exhibit.

"I consider this the finest exhibition we have had," he said. "There are a greater number of flowers on view and the arrangement is more beautiful and comprehensive. Everybody ought to be proud of it."

The crowd at the conservatories was double the number that saw the chrysanthemums on the previous Sunday, and many persons were obliged to stand in the cold wind that swept across the parks before getting inside the doors.

Every seat in the music hall was filled, many visitors from out of town taking advantage of the opportunity to hear Edwin H. Lemare's organ recital.

The Highland zoo boasted of three new members to its population by the arrival of two horned owls from E. B. Hofmeister of Braddock and a perbica hen, donated by George C. Stone of Avalon. The hen resembles a pheasant and was sent here from Greece.

Foot Crushed Under Car.

James Cobb, colored, aged 16, of 527 Elenora street, Allegheny, had his right foot crushed yesterday by being run over by a Perrysville avenue car at North avenue and Federal street. He was taken to the Allegheny General hospital, where his foot was amputated at the ankle. He was trying to board the car while it was moving, when he slipped and fell under the wheels. He says some one pushed him off the car.

Caught Under Falling Bar.

Four foreigners were seriously injured Saturday afternoon at the open-hearth furnaces of the Carbon Steel Company at Thirty-second street and the Allegheny Valley railroad by an I-bar slipping from their grasp while they were trying to place it in position on the roof of the shop. John Karpinsky had his back badly wrenched and was otherwise hurt, and Dominic Czarniski, Andrew Corelvrez and another foreigner were badly bruised.

A GLIMPSE OF DREAMLAND FROM FRENCHMAN'S BRUSH

No picture in the international exhibition at the Carnegie galleries attracts more attention than Edmund Aman-Jean's delicate impressionistic work, "The Mirror in the Vase." This is the painting which inspired Alexander Roche, M. Aman-Jean's Scotch contemporary on the art jury, to say: "Aman-Jean lives in dreamland. You can't make love to the women of his brush. They are dainty, fragile creatures, that would seem ready to flee if you should approach the canvas."

TOLD IN NUTSHELL ALL NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

Sunday Gazette Contained Wealth of Information and Was Bright in Feature Departments.

"It was a great newspaper," one heard on every hand yesterday, the reference being to The Pittsburgh Sunday Gazette. And what everybody says must be true. It was a great newspaper, replete with news, with stories, with features, with pictures—Payne's pictures, and there is hardly a schoolboy in Allegheny county now who is not intimately acquainted with them. The world simply shed news from every crevice on Saturday, and each and every particle of it was found in the columns of The Sunday Gazette. The feature writers were apparently in their best form, for their stories were told in exceptionally interesting vein. The closing events of the great national campaign all foretold the triumph of Republicanism at the polls on Tuesday and this in itself was enough to fill an ordinary newspaper. But The Sunday Gazette did not confine itself to the great question of the day. It told all of the news.

Chairman Corteiyou claims 314 votes for President Roosevelt, and declares the campaign funds were voluntarily contributed. Henry G. Davis says West Virginia will go Democratic on both state and national tickets. A New York lawyer points out the fact that the trust magnates are openly working for Parker. The Democratic headquarters at Harrisburg have been closed. The bets posted on the presidential election will aggregate $2,000,000. Voters generally approve of president's reply to the slanderous attacks of Judge Parker. Senator Fairbanks closes the campaign in Indiana. Judge Parker, in speech in New York, reiterates his charges that corporate interests are contributors to the Republican campaign fund.

The fall of Port Arthur is near at hand. Japan accuses the Russians at Port Arthur of killing and robbing the wounded Japanese. Russia accepts the draft of the convention providing for the court of inquiry into the North sea incident. Contending armies in Manchuria are so close together that maneuvers are impossible. Russia springs sensational story that Japanese consul at The Hague planned attack on Baltic squadron.

Southerners and westerners need no money from the east to handle their crops. Former Mayor McCue of Charlottesville, Va., was found guilty of murder in the first degree for the killing of his wife. United States consul at Port Dietrich, Nicaragua, resigns post to manage the Dietrich projects.

Chairman Penrose of the Pennsylvania Republican executive committee says state will give greater majority for Roosevelt than it gave for McKinley.

At Old City hall Senator Knox refuted Judge Parker's charges against President Roosevelt. Great Republican parade and demonstration in this city to wind up the campaign. Pittsburgh Railways Company digs long trench through Euclid avenue, East End, for new car tracks. Remarkable record of progress made in Carnegie technical school plans in first year of Director Hamerschlag's work.

Joseph Feiter, a lunatic, petitions court to remove his son as his committee, on the ground that he has recovered, and that the son is now insane. Judge Rodgers decides that a mother is the proper person to nurse her sick child. Important decision on the responsibility of an executor. More suits are growing out of the Harwick mine disaster.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6.—The delegation from the Iron and Steel Institute of Great Britain was today given a private view of the palace mines and metallurgy by Dr. J. A. Holmes, chief of the department. After luncheon a demonstration of a new thermit process was given in the mining gulch, followed by an inspection of the model foundry.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET WILL CARRY NEW YORK

Gov. Odell Simply Repeats His Estimate That President Roosevelt and Mr. Higgins Will Have Pluralities.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Quiet times marked the Sunday preceding the election at the headquarters of both state committees today. Gov. Odell would make no further predictions than have already been made that New York would cast its vote for Roosevelt for president and Higgins for governor.

Democratic Chairman Cord Meyer was not at headquarters today, but State Senator Patrick H. McCarren, chairman of the executive committee, reiterated his declaration that Parker would be elected and Herrick would carry the state.

William Halpin, chairman of the executive committee of the Republican county committee, tonight gave out a forecast of the result in which he estimated 154,000 votes in New York county for Roosevelt and 100,000 for Parker, with about 40,000 votes going to other candidates. Continuing he says:

"I do not estimate that the difference between the vote of Roosevelt and Higgins in New York county will exceed 11,000. So that Higgins should receive 143,000 as against 207,000 for Herrick, a plurality of 64,000 for Herrick in New York county.

"If one did not have to keep in mind the considerable Democratic majorities cast in New York county in the years gone by it would be possible to estimate that the majorities against Roosevelt in New York county would be less than 42,000, and against Higgins less than 64,000. But in any event I cannot see how these figures will be exceeded."

WORK ON FARMER'S BANK ANNEX STARTS TODAY

New Building Will Cost $90,000 and Will Contain Fine Restaurant and Rathskeller.

Work will begin this morning on the erection of the two-story annex to the Farmers Deposit National bank building, which will contain when completed, it is claimed, the finest restaurant in the city. The building, which will front on Oliver avenue, will be about 100 feet square and of brick and terra cotta with steel frame. In the basement will be a rathskeller, for which a license will be secured next spring.

A large dining room will be on the first floor and private dining rooms on the second floor. The interior of the building will be of marble and hard wood and beautiful frescoes.

The contract has been awarded to W. F. Trimble & Sons, the price of the contract being $90,000. The building will be completed early in the spring. The principal entrance will be from Oliver avenue and there will be another entrance from the Farmers bank building.

ENVELOPE GAME WORKS WELL.

East End Business Men Get Thanks in Exchange for $20 Bills.

"Thanks old man, I need the money," written on a slip of paper, was all that Thomas Massing of 7908 Frankstown avenue found in an envelope that he supposed contained $20. He was the victim of the same game that has been worked by a smooth young man on other East End business men during the past week. Among the other victims were Daniel Campbell of 3625 Butler street and Wharton Lang of 405 Brushton avenue.

The stranger asks for a $20 bill to enclose in an envelope for mailing. He tenders in exchange a number of small bills. It is discovered that these do not total $20 and he hands back the envelope supposed to contain the victim's $20, saying he will return in a minute with the needed balance. "Thanks" is all that the envelope holds.

ARE AFRAID OF FLOODS.

Etna and Sharpsburg Councilmen Will Meet Railroad Officials.

A committee of councilmen from Etna and Sharpsburg will wait upon officials of the West Penn railroad today to protest against the company's driving piles across the mouth of Pine creek in Etna in order to build a new trestle. It is claimed that seven rows of piles have already been placed, and they promise to be a menace in time of high water, damming the creek and flooding the two boroughs.

The nuisance maintained for years by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near the same place has recently been abated on the request of the two boroughs, and the old wooden trestle is being replaced with a stone and steel bridge. A vigorous protest will be made against the establishment of a similar nuisance by the West Penn railroad.

CANAL TO LAKES WILL BE TOPIC

Congressman Dalzell Will Address Social Meeting of the M. & M. Association.

BUSINESS MEN ARE INTERESTED

The third of the series of social meetings of the Merchants and Manufacturers association of Pittsburgh is announced to take place at the Union club at 6 p. m., Tuesday, November 29. It will have as its principal feature an address by the Hon. John Dalzell, Pittsburgh's distinguished congressman, on the "Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal."

Although the fact that the dinner was to be held on that date was settled by the entertainment and reception committee of the association only a few days ago, it had become known to a few and much interest has been expressed already. The subject to be considered is accepted as one of the most important now affecting Pittsburgh's commerce with the cities of the Great Lakes and the northwest, and Congressman Dalzell's efforts to obtain the legislation necessary to make the plan a success are recognized as giving him the right to speak with authority on the propect.

In speaking of the matter General Manager James W. Wardrop of the association said:

To Increase Transportation Facilities.

One of the greatest objects of the association is to largely increase the transportation facilities of the Pittsburgh district, not only those by railroad, but also those by water. In investigating the means of doing the latter, the management have been greatly impressed by the effort which New York city is making to increase its commerce and industries by the improvement of the Erie canal. The people of New York state have recently voted over $100,000,000 for this purpose, the majority for the loan coming principally from the city. The advantages which will accrue to New York from this improvement are so obvious that the management of the M. & M. association has naturally had its attention called to a similar, but even more important project, affecting this community, the Lake Erie and Ohio river ship canal, a bill to permit the building of which is now before the national house of representatives and has been favorably acted on by the committee on railroads and canals.

The coming social meeting of the association will therefore be principally devoted to this subject. The Hon. John Dalzell, who has charge of the ship canal bill, has been invited to be the chief guest of the association and to speak on the subject, and has accepted. John E. Shaw, who was secretary of the provisional ship canal committee, will also fully elucidate the benefits which will result from the building of the canal and will present a large amount of new information on the subject. It is proposed to invite to the meeting all the congressmen in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, whose districts would be directly benefited by the canal, and also the prominent business men and manufacturers in these states who have in the past shown their interest in the project.

Does Not Ask an Appropriation.

The object of the management of the M. & M. association is to afford an opportunity to the people of the Pittsburgh district to become thoroughly informed upon the subject so that they may properly support the efforts of Mr. Dalzell to further the speedy passage of the ship canal bill through congress. The bill, it may be remarked, does not ask any government appropriation, but only gives national authority to those named in it to proceed to form a stock company to build the canal, an authority already granted by the state governments of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

In addition to Mr. Dalzell's address there will be one by Robert C. Hall, the Pittsburgh broker, who will speak on some other subject of interest to the "M. and M." Judge Elliott Rodgers has consented to act as toastmaster at the dinner. The members of the committee in charge are: F. R. Babcock, chairman; F. R. Pearson, R. P. Duff, W. B. Wolfe, J. S. Wightman, H. C. Beggs, Charles L. Hamilton, William H. Hayes, A. J. Logan, James Riley, E. E. Bonneville and Otto Heeren.

OLDEST ENGINEER DEAD.

He Was Christian Smith, Inventor of the Feeding Tank for Locomotives.

CUMBERLAND, MD., Nov. 6.—(Special.)—Christian Smith, said to have been the oldest engineer in the world, died last night at his home near Sandy Hook, aged 93 years.

Smith went into the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio at a very early age, and served successively as driver of trains, horses then being used; fireman, locomotive engineer, station agent, train dispatcher at Sandy Hook during the civil war and foreman of engines, retiring from the latter position to his farm in 1878.

Smith was an Odd Fellow for 60 years. He was the inventor of the feeding tank for locomotives, used on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad.

STILL BUSY IN OHIO.

Campaign Becomes Suddenly Active in Buckeye State on the Eve of Election.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6.—Instead of the campaign being practically closed, as usual on the Sunday preceding the election, it seems just to have begun here and elsewhere in Ohio. There were numerous conferences of Republicans discussing the letter of President Roosevelt and the speeches of Judge Parker.

At the same time, the Democrats were more active than ever, and in some quarters jubilant. The Socialists also took up the controversy and continued their meetings, which they have been holding for weeks in public places.

NO MORAL PRINCIPLE INVOLVED IN CAMPAIGN

Dr. Parkhurst Explains Why He Made No Election Comment in His Sermon.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst made no reference to the election in his sermon today. For several years, especially upon the eve of a presidential election, Dr. Parkhurst has referred in his sermon the Sunday before the election to the political parties and candidates.

When asked why he did not make any mention of the coming election, Dr. Parkhurst said:

"In the present campaign there is no moral principle involved. In neither party platform is there anything distinctly immoral, any bad principle or anything, in fact, to call for comment from the pulpit. It is purely a question of the personality of the men who are candidates."
